Four Missing in Boat Off North Shore

Two Everett men and two boys, missing all night in a 35-foot cabin cruiser, were sought by coastguards off the North Shore coast today after a night that saw ships in peril from accidents and fire and a boat party of seven saved off Outer Brewster Island.

The four for whom the coastguards are searching in a sea reach from Boston to Gloucester are Attorney John J. Connors and his brother, Richard M. Connors, 40, both of High street, Everett; the latter's son, William, eight, and a neighbor and chum, Thomas Sexton, also eight.

Yesterday, at 11 a. m., the party left the Mystic Docks in Charlestown to go to Gloucester in the gasoline-powered cruiser. When they failed to arrive, worried relatives notified police and the coastguards.

An early report today was that the two men and two boys had been found in their craft off Outer Brewster at the far end of Boston Harbor, but this rescue by the coastguards proved to be that of a 35-foot motorboat from Wollaston, which latter was towed to Savin Hill.

One boat, a 35-foot motorboat, had nearly drifted on the rocks after its engine went dead at dusk last night.

In this craft were the owner,

NEW WOMAN QUIZZED IN LINDY CASE

New York, Oct. 1—Bronx District Attorney Samuel J. Foley admitted today in response to inquiries that he had talked with an "important woman witness" in the Lindbergh kidnaping case "outside his office."

The interview is supposed to have taken place at her home, but Foley would disclose no details, and the woman's identity is supposed to be unknown even to the prosecutor's assistants. He declined to say when he expected to hear from her again.

Several psychiatrists, and not three as originally announced, will conduct mental tests of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, indicted as extortioner in the case.

Hauptmann will be extradited to New Jersey to stand trial on murder and kidnap charges, before being tried in New York for extortion, Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, indicated today. In Trenton, following a conference with Attorney-General David T. Wilentz and Col. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police.

Vanderbilt Heiress Tortured Says Nurse

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 1—Charges that 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, "poor little rich girl" heiress, was mistreated by her mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, and by Prince Hohenlohe, kinsman of the ex-Kaiser, with whom Mrs. Vanderbilt was alleged to have been intimate, were aired today in the court battle launched by Mrs. Vanderbilt to regain custody of the child from her paternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

From teh prim but determined lips of Mrs. Emma Sullivan Keilich, Gloria's nurse, came the charge that the little girl "always cried when Prince Hohenlohe burned her with a cigarette."

And this treatment, the nurse maintained under questioning from Justice Carewe, was not an accident. She insisted.

"They told me it was an accident but the child told me she was burned on purpose."

BARES GAY PARTIES

It was a bleak picture that Gloria's nurse drew of her charge's life—an acid etched description of an unfeeling mother who danced and flirted through the smart resorts of Biarritz, heedless of the little girl's health and happiness, and of two winters spent in a Paris apartment that was "full of rats" which frightened Gloria "terribly."

At Biarritz, Mrs. Keislich testified, Prince Hohenlohe had a room on the same floor as Mrs. Vanderbilt at a "smart villa." On one occasion, she related, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother, awakened her in the wee

MULLONEY, DEERY ARE GUILTY IN BANK CASE

Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the closed Federal National Bank, today was found guilty of the misapplication of $131,000 of the bank's funds.

The verdict was handed down by Federal Judge James M. Morton, Jr., at the conclusion of a jury-waived trial. It took the court 25 minutes to read the detailed verdict.

In his findings, the Judge declared the two bankers were not guilty of a charge of making false entry in the books of both the Federal National and the Salem Trust.

Sentence will be passed on the two bankers two weeks from today, Judge Morton announced.

The verdict was handed down shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon by Federal Judge James M. Morton, Jr., in a crowded and noisy courtroom.

STORES HURT AS SHOPPERS ARE KEPT HOME

Downtown Boston traffic was at a virtual standstill, and police were buried under a storm of protests when the new "no fix" parking law went into effect today.

While Representative Hyman Manevitch of Dorchester led an ever-growing movement to repeal the new law by a special session of legislature, police told irate motorists that they were helpless and advised them to see their representatives and get the law repealed.

Leading the protestors who got red tags tottying them to appear in court were a large number of shoppers, who said they were tagged while in downtown stores making purchases.

"I that's the way things are going to be, we'll do our shopping elsewhere," was the usual statement in these cases.

Added to the shoppers' protests were calls for relief from doctors, welfare workers, Salvation Army drivers and others who face a fine and, perhaps, the loss of their license as a result of the new regulations.

And, while the streets were practically void of automobile traffic, parking lots and garages all reported a rushing business. Most of the downtown parking lots were filled with automobiles of workers before the shopping traffic began.

Manevitch called a conference by today to demand a special, unpaid

BANKER PRINCE IS OPTIMISTIC

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 1—Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier, in an interview before his departure for Europe, said he believed "we have reached the turn and the situation should be better from now on."

He explained that when "everybody else is bearish," he was inclined to be bullish.

He also expressed the opinion that no railroad receiverships are to be expected between now and the end of the year, and that in coming months constructive efforts will be taken which will considerably improve business conditions.

Prince, an important factor in the affairs of Armour & Co., is the author of the so-called Prince plan for consolidation of American railroads.

RANSOM CASH HUNTED ON ISLANDS HAUPTMANN VISITED

Island Liver—Bruno Hauptmann, who romped with the Lutzenberg girl on Hunter's Island, in Long Island Sound. He spent much of his time playing quoits. It was story told by a Martin Shapiro, who met the prisoner at quoits, which brought police to Hunter's Island to hunt for kidnap ransom money.

Briar Island—It was on this rocky coast island that Bruno Hauptmann, held on extortion charge in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, often spent week-ends and many weekdays. This island will be combed by police for ransom money hideouts.

Anita Lutzenberg, the pretty friend of Bruno Hauptmann. Hauptmann seemed to have a love for Islands—a desire to be away from the mainland. Besides Hunters' Island he spent much time on Twin Island and Briar Island, both in Long Island waters.

GRILL OF FISCH KIN FUTILE

Leipzig, Germany, Oct. 1—Arthur Johnson, New York detective, kept Hannah Fisch and her brother, Pinkus, all day at police headquarters here, continuing his questions concerning their brother, the late Isidor Fisch.

Isidor, who died here last March, is the man who Bruno Richard Hauptmann said gave him the Lindbergh ransom money.

"Nothing concrete came out of it," said Johnson here, concerning his questioning of Fisch's relatives.

He also questioned the mother of Heiner Uhlig, who was said to have repeated her conviction that her son was innocent of any connection with the Lindbergh kidnap case. Uhlig was released after questioning in New York.

Johnson said the statements of Hannah Fisch failed to gibe in some details with those of her brother, Pinkus.

"I made careful notes of everything," he said, "but nothing really new was brought up today."

Twin Island—This is another of the suspect's island haunts. In the picture are John Deciancia (left) and Philip Rosenblatt, both of the Bronx. Deciancia told the Bronx police that "Hauptmann and all his crowd went in for the nudist stuff as they do in Germany," in interview. This is one of the shacks. that the deposit some time ago of currency later found to be part of the Lindbergh ransom money by a still the subject of investigation.

He also confirmed the fact that one of the ransom bills had turned up a day after the ransom money was paid, April 2, 1932.

Meantime, the short affidavit on which Hauptmann was held prior to his indictment, was dismissed by Magistrate William Klapp in West Farms court today. Hauptmann was not brought into court for the routine proceeding, which required only about half a minute.

EXAMINATION WEDNESDAY

Foley said the mental examination of Hauptmann probably would take place Wednesday. He added:

"New Jersey has indicated it wants three psychiatrists," Foley said. "I want several myself, one of whom will be Dr. S. Philip Goodhart, who has helped me in other cases. The defense has indicated an intention to have one present."

The Bronx prosecutor said that the indictment reached by the Bronx County Grand Jury last week, charging Hauptmann with extortion, will be the indictment on which the prisoner will be tried here, "unless new evidence brought warrantless new indictment." He declared:

"There will be no one indicted in the Bronx as 'John Doe' or 'Jane Doe.'"

Today, Foley said, he started separating the "investigating" and "prosecuting" angles of the case. However, he made it clear that he was still in charge of the case here and that all investigating agencies were reporting to him.

New Jersey was particularly anxious to try Hauptmann, as a murder charge which carries a death sentence may be preferred against him in the state where the killing of the Lindbergh baby took place.

PARLEY ON EXTRADITION

In New York, the former wartime machine gunner faces only an extortion charge.

New Jersey pointed out that an acquittal in New York on the extortion charges might weaken prosecution in kidnaping or murder charges, making it advisable to try the surly German in New Jersey first.

According to reliable information, proof definite and irrefutable that Hauptmann was in the vicinity of the Lindbergh home in Hopewell, N. J., the day the noted aviator's son was stolen from his crib, will be made public by New Jersey authorities today.

This evidence, if it is forthcoming, will clear away the last barrier to the prompt extradition and trial of Hauptmann on a first degree murder charge.

New Jersey need prove only that Hauptmann—or any other suspect—had a share in the Lindbergh kidnaping in order to convict him of murder.

Not even a plea that the baby was accidentally dropped from the kidnaper's ladder and killed could prevent a death sentence. Premeditation need not be shown.

LAW IS SPECIFIC

New Jersey's law is specific on that point. The Crimes Act, revised in 1898, defines murder in the first degree as any homicide "committed in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate" any burglary. Under burglary it includes breaking and entering with intent to steal—and kidnaping is named as a form of stealing.

Likewise, it is common law that all who are present, abet or aid in a felony are principals and must suffer the full consequences.

According to Assistant Attorney General Joseph Lanigan ,the new evidence against the Jersey authorities of an "air-tight" case against Hauptmann.

Department of Justice agents made cryptic statements which led to the conclusion they were aware of the happenings in New Jersey.

They declared that developments of the preceding 48 hours had taken the case "completely out of the circumstantial category."

The government officers followed this with the statement they were searching for accomplices, although Lanigan, who has become one of the leading figures in the probe, professed to know nothing of the identification of anyone except Hauptmann.

GIRL IS GRILLED

Foley today said he would ask for a special jury panel of 200 veniremen in preparation for trial of Hauptmann on the extortion indictment.

Search of the walls of Hauptmann's apartment was continued today by detectives in the hope that more of the missing ransom money would be disclosed. The garage back of the Hauptmann home yielded $14,573 and $20 more was found on the German's person when he was arrested.

In all, only $19,705 of the $50,000 which Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon tossed over the graveyard wall in supposed ransom for the Lindbergh baby had turned up. More than 1200 bills have been accounted for but three-fifths of the cash is still missing.

Belated conviction that Hauptmann did not act alone in collection of the $50,000 ransom money and that at least three persons were involved in the actual kidnaping and murder came from two sources.

Evidence to this effect is understood to have been wrung from the unamed blonde witness whom Foley describes as "next to Hauptmann the most important figure in the Lindbergh case." This girl was reputed to be acquainted with Dr. Condon.

"ATTRACTIVE BLONDE"

Foley refused even to hint at the identity of the girl witness who became silhouetted against the kidnap case background when the week-end's most sensational development. Foley said she was not subpoenaed even to assistants in his office.

Despite official secrecy, however, there were semi-official leaks in information and the girl was described as "in her twenties," and a "fairly attractive blonde." The same sources reported she was acquainted with Dr. Condon, and even knew about the disposition of the ransom money.

She was also reported to have drawn into the investigation a former policeman who lived near Hauptmann's summer home on City Island, off the Bronx shore.

Department of Justice agents and police said that five more Lindbergh ransom bills had turned up, while Foley denied knowing anything about it. The bills were reported to have been turned in to the Federal Reserve Bank by a New York bank with 73 branches, making it difficult to trace them.

Investigators believed they had been put into circulation before Hauptmann's arrest, pointing out that persons receiving bills often hold them indefinitely.

Too Busy to See Lindy Bills

A last-minute rush to pay municipal taxes before a six per cent penalty becomes effective tomorrow at midnight was on today in the office of City Collector John F. Doherty. After tomorrow, the penalty, retroactive to Sept. 15, will be assessed, Doherty reported that his aides are receiving a number of $10 and $20 gold back certificates but added his clerks are "too busy" to make note of the gold backs despite the nation-wide check being made on such bills in connection with the Lindbergh kidnap ransom money.

Color Movies 'Next Big Step'

Hollywood, Oct. 1—Powers in the movie business believe color pictures will be the next big development for the industry.

Adolph Zukor, president of one of the major studios, says "Color is in pictures to stay," although his organization has not made such a film in the past five years.

BRUNO'S WIFE'S TRIP STUDIED

By International News Service

Leipzig, Germany, Oct. 1—That trip Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann made to Germany in 1932 may be the next point in the German end of the Lindbergh case that Detective Arthur Johnson of New York investigates.

Although Johnson was silent on plans, it appeared likely today that he will go next to Markgroeningen, Wuerttemberg, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann's home town, where her aged parents live.

Johnson is especially anxious to trace and Lindbergh gold certificates that turned up in Europe.

Sifting carefully all the data he gathered in Dresden, Kamenz and Leipzig, Johnson was busy today drafting a long report to dispatch to New York authorities. It traces Hauptmann's background from his cradle in Germany almost to his arrest in the Bronx.

The role played by the late Isidor Fisch in Hauptmann's life, and whether Fisch knew more than his relatives will admit about the kidnaping, will be set forth as far as possible on the basis of facts now known.

Weds Girl to Nail Lie and Trap His Rival

He was falsely charged! A girl knew the truth that would clear him. And so Dominic Reggiere of Millbury street, Worcester, married the girl to learn her secret, according to his amazing story today to police.

His story brought about the arrest of John Croft, 36, a Boston magazine salesman, on a charge of subornation of perjury. Boston police making the arrest at the South Station on request of Worcester authorities.

According to Reggiere and his wife, the former Miss Gladys White, once a Worcester Salvation Army worker, she had Reggiere arrested about a year ago on the charge that he was the father of her child.

In court Reggiere was ordered to pay a weekly sum for support of the child.

But Reggiere knew he was innocent, he told police. He knew that only Miss White could clear him—if she would—and so he proposed to her and they were married last May.

Reggiere's plan worked, he said, and his bride confessed to him that Croft was actually father of the child. He took her to Worcester police headquarters, where she repeated her statement, according to police records, and added that Croft had paid her $200 to testify in court that Reggiere was the father.

Following her story, police requested that she make an appointment to meet Croft, and she made one for the South Station in Boston. When the meeting took place, officers stepped forward and placed him under arrest.

GERMAN LINER CALLS FOR AID

The German steamer Koenigstein from Antwerp was proceeding toward New York today after a serious fire aboard was extinguished by heroic efforts of the crew.

The liner sent out an SOS when 320 miles out of Boston, but a later wireless reported the blaze under control.

Several coast guard boats were dispatched to her aid. The captain of the Koenigstein flashed his thanks to the coast guard in the following message:

"Fire extinguished. Thanks for attention and standby."

VFW Launches New Bonus War; Roosevelt Asks Aid

By Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 1—More than 7,000 ex-service men launched their campaign for immediate payment of adjusted service compensation certificates as the thirty-fifth annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars opened today.

The opening gun for payment was fired in a speech by Congressman Wright Patman, Texas, fourth author of the adjusted compensation measure which passed Congress at the last session, and was defeated in the Senate.

Patman told the veterans that he already has on file a bill providing immediate payment of the adjusted service compensation certificates.

The Texan said he would push the fight as soon as Congress opens.

Payment would be in the form of $2,000,000,000 in certificates eligible for backing for currency which would be distributed among the veterans.

The Texan scouted the idea of danger from expanding the currency by the payment.

"Abuse of government by a few powerful bankers," Patman said, "is the greatest racket in the world. Saying they have a monopoly of credit, he declared they could render their services free. He denounced the present system of interest charges, which he said "will soon eat up a small balance."

CLUE TIGHTENS KAMINSKI NET

New London, Ct., Oct. 1—Following the story of Mrs. Roy Taylor, former classmate of Alexander J. Kaminski, that she had been approached by him on a street here, state and local police today believed they were closing in on the elusive fugitive murderer.

Mrs. Taylor told police that Kaminski had asked her how long she had been living here before she had hurriedly ended the meeting.

Peabody 'Finds' Kaminski

Peabody, Oct. 1—The law met Alexander Kaminski here and after an exchange of greetings, wished him the best of health, a prosperous future and happy retirement.

Police of Peabody were stopping automobiles to check on license registrations. Patrolman Maurice Collins stopped a sedan and asked for the name of the driver.

Alexander Kaminski came the reply.

Having in mind the escaped convict-killer of the same name, Patrolman Collins expected a gun and a bullet to follow the announcement, but nothing happened.

The driver proved to be a law-abiding citizen living in Hancock street, Peabody.

The baby was born to Mrs. Lyons, her second son, Saturday night at Misericordia Hospital here.

Japan Protests Russian Attack

Tokio, Oct. 1 (INS)—War talk again electrified the Far East today following charges by Japanese military authorities at Harbin, Manchuria, that Soviet cavalry had actually fired upon a Japanese surveying party near the Manchukuan-Siberian boundary. No one was wounded. Japan, it is understood, is filing a strong protest in Moscow.

Wives Should Tell in Lindy Type Cases, Women Write

Would Turn Against Husbands to Reveal All for Justice

There probably has never been a decision more momentous, or more appalling in its probable consequences, than that which confronts Mrs. Bruno R. Hauptmann.

Her husband stands accused of extortion, in connection with one of the most gruesome crimes in history, the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

The law gives the wife of an accused kidnaper, an extortioner, or the killer of a child the right to refrain from testifying against him.

And Mrs. Hauptmann, wife of the Lindbergh suspect and mother of his child, must shortly decide what stand she is to take.

What would most wives do?

LETTERS POURING IN

The Boston Evening American wants to know, and as the most direct method of finding out, has offered prizes for the best letters from its readers, in answer to the question:

"If your husband were a kidnaper, an extortionist, the killer of a child, would you protect him?"

There is no indication that Mrs. Hauptmann has concealed anything from the proper authorities. On the contrary, it is reported that she has disclosed everything that she knew bearing on the case.

Here are excerpts from letters that have come in so far. Every mail brings more, a veritable flood of answers, answers that take every angle into consideration and arrive at widely divergent conclusions.

A letter signed AGNES DUNCAN, 953 Hyde Park ave, Hyde Park, says, in part:

"If my husband were charged with the Lindbergh kidnaping, I should stand by him even though overwhelming proof left no doubt as to his guilt. . . . As the father of my child and the man who won my trust, he would be remembered by me for his kindness and finer traits when the world could only see the monster.

"But, broken heartedly, I should tell the truth as I knew it."

MRS. R. A. BACON, 37 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, says:

"I WOULD LIE" FOR MATE

"If I were the wife of a man accused of a crime such as the Lindbergh kidnaping I should certainly feel that, in revealing all I knew to the authorities, I should be protecting myself, my children and society at large in the only way possible under the circumstances."

HELEN DILLON of 67 Nahant street, Lynn:

CARY GRANT'S WIFE RUSHES TO MAMMA AFTER LOVE TIFF

ACTRESS SEES LAWYER, BUT MAY FORGIVE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Hollywood, Oct. 1.—Hollywood today was speculating on the outcome of the separation of blonde Virginia Cherrill and her actor husband, Cary Grant.

The Grants parted after a disagreement at a dinner party. Virginia went home to her mother, while Cary returned to his house hoping that his wife might change her mind and return. Virginia declared:

"It's true that we have had a quarrel. Whether it is permanent or not is up to Cary. I will not discuss the reason for our trouble, but things have been going from bad to worse.

LOVES HER HUSBAND

"I left Cary two weeks ago and consulted a lawyer. We later patched things up and I hoped that we might make a go of our marriage. I am in love with my husband and have been very unhappy over our inability to adjust our differences."

Cary, who went to the beach with his pal, Randolph Scott, was even less communicative than his wife. Said he:

"It is silly to say that Virginia and I have separated. We have just had a quarrel such as any married pair in Hollywood might have. You know how it is . . . people argue and disagree and then kiss and make up. I hope when I get home that Virginia will be waiting for me."

Virginia said that she would not be waiting for her husband and that he must come and get her and settle once and for all the issue in the entitment which has affected their marriage from the very start.

MARRIED IN LONDON

Miss Cherrill before her marriage was a screen actress. She was divorced from Irving Adler, a Chicago attorney, before she became Mr. Grant and was at one time rumored engaged to William Rhinelander Stewart, wealthy playboy.

Miss Cherrill's debut in pictures was startling. She came here from Chicago to visit her schoolgirl friend, Sue Carol. Charlie Chaplin engaged her to play the lead in "City Lights."

She married Mr. Grant after a romantic courtship when he went to visit his father in England last Christmas. Born Archie Leech, Grant has a great following in his native England. The Grants were married in London.

Hollywood friends, among them Randolph Scott, were confident that the Grants would not make this separation permanent, since they are admittedly in love with each other and since the reason for their continued battles is not another woman nor man, nor drink, the evils that most wives and husbands find it difficult to forgive and forget.

"Tragedy" Slaying Unfolds

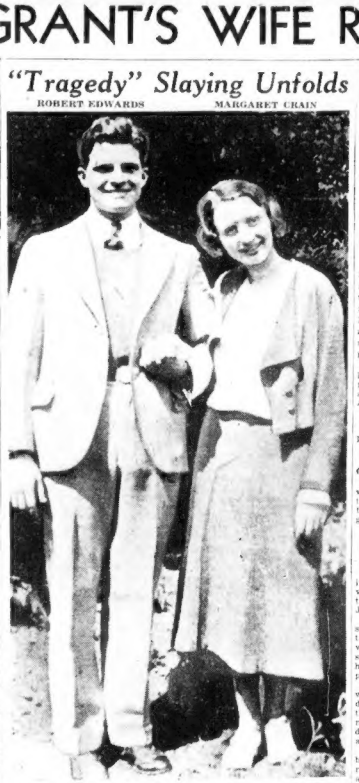
ROBERT EDWARDS MARGARET CRAIN



ROSETTA CULVER FREDA McKECHNIE

In Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, Robert Edwards, church worker, today was called to court to answer the charge of murdering his sweetheart, Freda McKechnie. Freda was found drowned in Harvey's Lake. Her head showed signs of having been blackjacked. The prosecution contends that another girl, Margaret Crain, shown above with Roberts, supplanted Freda in his affections. Rosetta Culver, above, was the last girl to see the victim before her death. They were close chums. Miss Culver is one of the state's important witnesses.

Lenglen Put Under Appendix Knife

Paris, Oct. 1 (AP)—Suzanne Lenglen, former woman tennis champion, underwent an emergency operation today in the American Hospital for the removal of her appendix.

She was rushed to the hospital after a sudden attack which physicians described as serious. The operation was successful, surgeons said, and her condition satisfactory.

LIFE HOPE FOR YOUTH HANGS ON OWN STORY

By DOROTHY ROE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 1.—A defense lawyer who never lost a case and a brilliant young district attorney determined on conviction fight grimly for the life of Bobby Edwards, youthful small-town Casanova, who went on trial today for the "American tragedy" murder of his back-yard sweetheart.

Although the state contends it is in possession of three signed confessions by the 21-year-old mine surveyor, defense counsel, Frank A. McGuigan, announces:

"We will demand complete acquittal."

And District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis says:

"Nothing but the death penalty will satisfy the state."

OWN BEST WITNESS

McGuigan, a criminal lawyer with an imposing record of acquittals, is silent as to the outlines of the defense. Quiet, suave, distinguished, he merely says:

"Robert Edwards will tell his own story to the jury and will prove beyond any reasonable doubt that he is not guilty of murder."

Edwards is charged with murdering Freda McKechnie, the girl who was to bear his child, while the two were swimming the night of July 30 in Harvey's lake.

A few hours before the handsome college-bred youth had attended a gay neighborhood party with his young church-worker sweetheart and the glowing Freda had confided to her friends their plans for a wedding.

Then the other young people went home, but Bobby and Freda drove out to Harvey's lake where they had spent many happy picnic hours. In the boy's car they donned their bathing suits, while a pale July moon looked on.

Some hours later Bobby returned, but Freda did not. Her body was recovered from the lake next day, and nearby divers found a jack that came from young Edward's car.

A coroner's examination showed that the girl was dead before her body sank to the bottom of the lake.

TOWN IS DIVIDED

The drab, cold mining town of Edwardsville, named after the defendant's family, is divided on the eve of Luzerne County's second "American Tragedy" trial.

On one side are the school friends of young Edwards, and the men and women who knew him as a child. They cannot believe he could be a murderer.

On the other are those who knew Freda McKechnie, who heard her adoring eulogies of Bobby, and who knew of her happiness over their betrothal.

They are bitter against the youth who, the State charges, murdered his humbler love to clear the way for his marriage to a girl of a higher social scale, 23-year-old Margaret Crain, music teacher of East Aurora, N. Y.

Feeling runs high as the trial starts.

CATINO ON TRIAL IN SLAYING OF SPINSTER

Samuel J. Catino, former Medford handy man, today went on trial in Middlesex court charged with the murder of Miss Alice G. Porter, Radcliffe graduate and Medford school teacher.

The case was called before Judge Raoul H. Beaudreau, with Assistant District-Attorney Paul R. Foley appearing for the government.

William R. Scharton, counsel for Abe Fisher in the Kenyhan Trust Company murder case, appeared for Catino.

DEAD FROM ARSENIC

Eight jurors were chosen before the court recessed at 1 p. m. During the morning the government used five challenges, and the defense seven. Eleven other prospective jurors were excused.

Before adjourning court for lunch, Judge Beaudreau announced that—contrary to the usual custom in criminal proceedings—the jury would not be locked up during the trial. The jurors will be permitted to go home at the end of each court session, he said, but warned them against discussing the case or reading newspaper accounts of it lest their judgment be influenced.

Miss Porter, a once wealthy spinster, was found dead on her bed on February 20. Death was caused by a dose of arsenic. Catino, who is 33 and who for more than 12 years was caretaker of her home at 140 Allston street, Medford, was arrested a short time later.

Miss Porter gained much publicity a few years ago when she sued the estate of her first cousin, Allen A. Hooker, Bromfield street note broker, for $700,000, charging that he had failed to carry out a contract to marry her and will her all his property.

In 1932, with Scharton acting as her council, she brought action for the discharge of a guardian who had been appointed for her. At that time it was revealed that no trace could be found of a large part of her fortune.

NAMED IN HER WILL

In a will, filed on February 24 of this year, Catino was named as the dead woman's sole heir. According to the will, he was also to receive anything she might get from the Hooker estate.

The names of Sarah Porter, of Langdon, N. H., an aunt, and Ada B. Porter, of Philadelphia, a cousin, were mentioned, but no part of her estate was left to them.

Heads State Democrats

As temporary chairman of the State Democratic Committee, Mrs. Helen I. Doherty McGillicuddy today takes over the duties of former State Chairman Joseph A. Maynard, who resigned in order to hold a federal office. Mrs. McGillicuddy is shown at Democratic headquarters on State street. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

WOMAN STEPS IN AS HEAD OF DEMOCRATS

Dr. Helen I. Doherty-McGillicuddy today became the temporary chairman of the Democratic State Committee. As senior vice-chairman, she took over the reins from Joseph A. Maynard, who retired in conformity with the Treasury order which forbids government officials holding party offices.

A number of women members of the State committee were present today at the informal exercises which attended the transfer of the chairmanship at Democratic State Committee headquarters, 92 State street. At a date to be announced the committee will be called to select a permanent chairman and a national committeewoman to succeed Miss Mary Ward, who resigned after being appointed commissioner of immigration.

Charles H. McGlue, campaign manager for James M. Curley, Democratic nominee for Governor, is slated for the permanent appointment.

It is expected that Mrs. Grace Howe, wife of Louis McH. Howe of Fall River, secretary to President Roosevelt, will be named national committeewoman.

Roosevelt Favors Road Safety Work

Cleveland, Oct. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt expressed hope that safety measures will reduce the toll of traffic accidents in a letter today to the National Safety Council, now in annual convention here.

"I am greatly impressed and pleased with the constructive steps already taken toward the elimination of accidents, especially highway disasters, which, because avoidable, are doubly tragic," the President wrote.

Stork Brings Six to Police Station

Special Officer Ernest L. Wooster of Field's Corner station house was in no humor for money business. But he pulled open the bottom drawer of his desk to get some report and found himself head over-heels in a mother cat's business.

Several hours before, a stray cat was seen crawling through a basement window of the station. The matter was forgotten until Officer Wooster opened the drawer.

The cat was there with her six kittens, all doing well, thank you.

Springfield Firm Wins Tax Slash

Washington, Oct. 1 (AP)—The United American Bosch Corporation of Springfield, Mass., was assessed income taxes of $7109 for 1928 and relieved from a claim for 1928 taxes in stipulation judgments filed today by the board of tax appeals.

The company had appealed assessments set originally at $69,568 for 1928 and $24,329 for 1929, and claiming the overpayment of $4999 in taxes for the latter year.

Mattapan Man, 55, Suicide by Rope

John C. Bowditch, 55, Greenfield road, Mattapan, was found dead hanging from a rope thrown over the top of a door in the living room of his home today. His wife summoned police from Hyde Park station and Patrolman Luke Naron cut the body down. The body was removed to the southern mortuary at the City Hospital.

Girls Flock to Love Death Trial; 5 Jurors Seated

tion of the jurors got under way.

Edwards was dressed immaculately in a blue suit, blue tie and white shirt. His dark hair was slicked back, his chin was set square, with lips pressed together, emphasizing the geometric outline of his other facial features.

WOMEN FLOCK TO TRIAL

Crowds of women, young and old, formed thick queues which twisted down the staircases of the palatial courthouse and out into the street and reached as far as the eye could follow.

Edwards stood up and heard the formal murder indictment read to him. He did not flick an eyelash.

Attorneys for both defense and prosecution expected difficulty in obtaining a jury because of tense feelings and comments aired in both Edwards and Freda had spent their lives, and because of the close parallel of the case to the novel, "An American Tragedy."

Prospective jurors were questioned closely about their "previous opinions."

Freda's brother John, and her uncle, Shadrick Dodd, sipped into rear seats just as court opened.

CHAIR SOUGHT

In their questioning of the talesmen, opposing counsel stressed particular angles. Prosecutor Thomas Lewis pounded away at the attitude of each venireman regarding capital punishment. The State is seeking the electric chair for the young surveyor's helper.

Defense Counsel Frank McGuigan, through questions, pictured Edwards as a bug under a microscope. He asked if talesmen would be prejudiced by the "ordeal" the defendant was undergoing in having photographers' flash-light bulbs "popping in his face."

Daniel Edwards, father of the defendant, sat behind defense counsel while George McKechnie, father of the dead girl, moved into a seat beside the district attorney and suggested questions.

FRIENDSHIP ENDED

This murder trial has broken up a lifetime friendship between the Edwards' and McKechnie family. Members of the Edwards clan have married into the McKechnie clan. The families have lived next to each other in Edwardsville, a residential town atop a hill overlooking the Susquehanna river.

McKechnie, since the finding of the body of his daughter in Harvey's lake, has moved his family.

With his jaw set as hard as that of the defendant, McKechnie occasionally glares over his shoulder. He does not glare at the alleged slayer of his daughter but at the defendants father, his former bosom friend.

No matter what the outcome of this trial, it looks as if a bitter feud has been born between the Welsh clan of the Edwards and the Scotch clan of the McKechnies.

PATIENT BEATS TWO, ESCAPES

Northampton, Oct. 1.—After beating two attendants unconscious with a heavy steel bar, Morris Fitzgerald, of Joy street, West Springfield, escaped from the Northampton State Hospital, where he was a patient.

It was the second time in three months that he has fled from the institution, and a thorough search was organized immediately.

Hospital officials refused to disclose the names of the two injured staff members, but assured all questioners that their condition was not serious.

State police took charge of the search. Fitzgerald's description was broadcast through the State over the police teletype system as well as the State police radio.

Curley in 1936 Battle for Senate Is Predicted

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 1—Impartial Washington observers, amused by the presence of the name of James M. Curley on the same Democratic ticket with Senator David I. Walsh, now are speculating on the possibility that the three-time Boston Mayor may yet sit with Walsh in the Senate.

It's a long way off, of course, but to the political dopesters 1936 is just around the corner. There are many who see a strong likelihood that, whoever wins this year's gubernatorial fight in Massachusetts, Daniel G. Bacon and Curley will be seen in the 1936 Senatorial campaign, for the seat now held by Marcus Coolidge of Fitchburg.

G. O. P. LESS CONFIDENT

Curley's victory did much to offset administration concern over the Michigan primaries, in which Republicans polled heavy votes. And the party leadership now plans a determined drive to put the former mayor of Boston in th governor's chair.

Republicans here, who previously predicted Bacon would "coast in" in November, now concede the race will be close, while Democrats predict a Curley triumph and, per se, a sweeping endorsement for the Roosevelt administration.

Competent neutral observers believe the outcome will depend on the extent to which followers of Walsh and Gove, nor Ely refuse to follow the Curley banner.

W. TCH JAMES ROOSEVELT

The part James Roosevelt plays in Massachusetts politics is of consid. interest here, and one important Washington newspaper sees in Curley's victory a possibility that young Jimmy may seek high office hiuself before long.

In a recent editorial, the Washington Star commented:

"The President's son, James Roosevelt, took no part in the primary campaign. It is related, however, that he and a group of friends stood backstage and witnessed the great ovation given Curley at his first meeting in Boston before the election.

"The Curley victory means a new and bigger break in Massachusetts for the Roosevelts. It puts Curley in a dominating position as Democratic leader. It may mean a later nomination of James Roosevelt for chief executive of the state if the President's son desires to continue in politics."

MYSTERY MAN NOW SOUGHT IN SPEER DEATH

By JOHN NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Northfield, Oct. 1—A solution of the puzzling murder of Dr. Elliott Speer, was expected momentarily today as police sought a mysterious "Mr. B" with orders to arrest him on sight.

The clue, which police today were confident would shortly lead to the slayer of the youthful headmaster of Mr. Hermon School here 16 days ago, was produced, strangely enough, by an elderly poet, son of one of Lincoln's generals in the Civil War.

Police guarded jealously the identity of the new slaying suspect. The "Mr. B" was known, however, to be a personal friend of the murdered headmaster, and for many years on intimate terms with the Mr. Hermon faculty.

FAMILIAR WITH GROUNDS

"Mr. B." owns a large sedan similar to that seen on the campus the night of the murder.

"Mr. B." was for a number of years closely connected with the Mt. Herman School. He knew the grounds so well that he would have had little difficulty in finding his way through the winding field for many years and knew the affairs of the late headmaster perhaps better than any one connected with the school.

NEW CLUE FOLLOWED

After a long conference with Phelps late last week, Detectives Albert Dasey and Richard Cotter left for Brattleboro, Vt., to interview a former Northfield woman they knew about the case. They declined to reveal the woman's name.

Returning to their headquarters at the Bernardston Inn here, the state detectives declared that for the first time since the case opened they had obtained information which made them optimistic of an early solution of the murder mystery.

The last student suspect was eliminated by detectives in New York, who sent word that a youth under investigation there had provided a perfect alibi.

NORMA APPEAL WITHDRAWN

Norma Brighton Millen's appeal to Supreme Court from the finding of guilty in Dedham Superior Court on a charge of being an accessory after the fact to the murders of Patrolmen Forbes McLeod and Frank Haddock of Needham and accessory after the fact to robbery was withdrawn today.

Apparently content with her sentence of one year in Dedham jail, the withdrawal notice was received by the Supreme Court clerk today from Attorney George A. Douglas, her counsel.

Because the hearing list was printed two weeks in advance of full bench sittings, which open today, the case appears on the list. After the notice was received, however, the case was crossed off.

Possession of little ten-year-old Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, four million dollar heiress, which precipitated a court-free-for-all among three famous society families, is expected to be awarded by the Supreme Court of New York today. Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, mother of the child and widow of Reginald Vanderbilt, who seeks custody of her daughter, is opposed by her own mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, and by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who now holds little Gloria. hours to peer into Mrs. Vanderbilt's room where she and the prince were "together, scantily dressed."

Mrs. Vanderbilt, the nurse continued, spent most of her time on the Riviera amusing herself and paying little attention to her child. There was no affection at all" shown Gloria, although when Mrs. Vanderbilt returned from a trip she would "hold out her arms to pick the child up."

Gloria's delicate health, Mrs. Keisilich declared, suffered from such neglect.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, a sympathetic figure in black, heard herself described by the family nurse as a "dancing mother," who spent her time in Paris in a continuous round of pleasure, to the neglect of the baby.

TELLS ABOUT PRINCE

The nurse's story was brought out, question by question, by Herbert E. Smythe, counsel for Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother, who is resisting her daughter's attempt to regain custody of Gloria. The nurse testified:

"Prince Hohenlohe had a room at Mrs. Vanderbilt's villa at Biarritz. It was on the same floor as Mrs. Vanderbilt's room, and I frequently saw him visit her there."

"Did you ever see anything intimate?"

"That's rather a delicate question."

"I know it is, but the court has got to hear about it."

Under urging, the nurse said that Mrs. Morgan had called her at 2 o'clock one morning and together they had peered through the slightly open door of Mrs. Vanderbilt's room.

SAW HER IN TEARS

The Prince and Mrs. Vanderbilt were together, scantily clad, the nurse said, and Mrs. Vanderbilt seemed to be crying. The nurse added:

"I used to see him in her room nearly every day, in the morning or early afternoon. He used to read to her.

SOME "NOT GENTLEMEN"

Mrs. Vanderbilt moved to Paris soon after the death of her husband and established her menage in a duplex apartment in a fashionable quarter.

After that, the nurse insisted, she saw little of Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Gloria saw even less.

Mrs. Keisilich said:

"She would go out in the afternoon and I wouldn't see her again until around 6 o'clock in the morning. I'd hear her come in then with her friends, all very gay."

Constance Bennett was an intimate friend in those days, the nurse said.

Another frequent caller was Miss Bennett's constant attendant at the time, a wealthy young Argentine, who called in company with others of the Parisian smart set.

Some of these Nurse Keislich described as "not the gentlemanly type."

'NRA Kid' Tells of More Robberies

Edward Domin, 19-year-old South End youth who amazed police with a frank recital of many burglaries and holdups here, in New York and in New Hampshire, recalled to detectives today a few more places he robbed.

In two South Boston markets, he claimed, he opened the safes marcely by using the dials and listening to the tumblers with a stethoscope. At the Beach Market in G street, according to his story, he obtained $1000 from the safe in this manner, while at the Morris Market in East Sixth street he got $36. A number of other addresses he furnished today to police as those he had rifled, included the provision house of Handschumacher & Co., Inc., in North street.

The affair was a tribute to Mr. Fox for his many years of successful efforts in promoting the interests of the fur industry, not only through operation of his retail establishments but by giving freely of his time and ability to the wholesale and manufacturing branches of the industry.

Mr. Fox is also widely known in European fur markets, where he has done much to promote friendly relationships along international trade lines.

George Jessel, stage and screen star, was master of ceremonies, assisted by Harry Hirshfield, cartoonist. During the evening Mr. Fox was presented with a cigarette case.

Many guests from various cities were present, including Eugene Ivus, publisher of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser, and John J. Cremmen, advertising director of these two newspapers.

END WORN-OUT COUNTY, SAYS HOLCOMBE

Prof. Holcombe

Professor Arthur N. Holcombe of Harvard University, one of the world's foremost authorities on government, today declared that the county form of government should be abolished — "lock, stock and barrel, root and branch." He said:

"County government should be abolished — lock, stock and barrel, root and branch. There is no sense in saving any part of the present set-up of county government. The duties now administered by the counties should be distributed among the various State departments. In a few cases, a union of towns would greatly remedy the situation.

"The county form of government literally comes down to us from the 'horseback' age. The old English county was the area which a man on horseback could cover in a day; that is, the distance he could cover by horse from his home to the county seat between the hours of sunrise and sunset."

ARCHAIC CONDITIONS

Professor Holcombe, who has written extensively on the subject of political science, is recognized as an authority on this phase of local government. He decried the archaic conditions now prevalent throughout the nation in the county-form of government. He pointed out the glaring defects of this system, the overlapping of government functions by the state, city and county governments. He said:

"We are out of the horseback age. But we still have the county. That type of government should be abolished.

SHERIFF OUTDATED

"The county sheriff's duty was to apprehend criminals. Today the bandit and gunman, using high powered automobiles, manage to getaway very easily. Before the sheriff reaches the limit of his jurisdiction, in the first hour, the criminal is miles away.

"This is absurd. The primary purpose of the sheriff's office has been eliminated.

SYSTEM AT FAULT

"Many of our county officials are admirable men. Their usefulness to the public is diminished by the defects of the system of county government under which they work.

"There are more than 3000 counties in the United States today. One-third of this number are ready to fold-up. This number has had a decline in population. Two values in those counties are falling. The counties cannot continue there in an acute crisis, meet their tax bills. In those Here, instead of an acute crisis, we have a chronic illness. This illness must be remedied immediately."

PLAN TO AVERT HALE RECOUNT

By Associated Press

Augusta, Me., Oct. 1—F. Harold Dubord (D.) of Waterville, contesting re-election of U. S. Senator Frederick Hale (R.) by 1701 votes, today asked Governor Brann and council to defer official tabulation of the votes until the principals inspect the ballots. It is believed that would require six weeks.

His motive, Dubord said, was to save the expenses of a state-wide recount.

Governor Brann indicated the proposal would be agreed to "all but about 2000 or 3000" of the nearly 500,000 votes cast.

POLITICAL ROW SPLITS A. F. L. WIDE OPEN

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Oct. 1 — The legions of American labor answer their annual muster call today.

It will be no mere dress parade.

Torn by internal strife and with a fearful eye toward NRA reorganization in Washington, the American Federation of Labor convention promises to be one of the most significant on record.

Two issues, it was predicted by leaders, will dominate. These are:

1—The eligibility of delegates from the carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers to the convention of the Building Trades Council of the American Federation of Labor—a jurisdictional dispute affecting 700,000 workers.

2—The appointment of Clay Williams, tobacco magnate and asserted "reactionary" employer, to the new administration board of the NRA.

MAY SPLIT CONVENTION

The first issue was admittedly most important to the delegates themselves. If left unresolved—as one prominent delegate phrased it —the breach may "split the convention wide open."

In a last minute attempt to keep the row and its inevitable disaffections off the floor of the convention, President William Green met in closed conference with the American Federation executive council and the two warring factions.

Reports were that Green had been given absolute arbitration powers but he himself refused to comment.

APPOINTMENT ARGUED

The Clay Williams issue, so far as could be learned, has no place on accredited committee reports.

But spokesmen declared that spontaneous resentment has arisen to his appointment, and that it will undoubtedly be argued on the convention floor.

Williams, president of the R. G. Reynolds Tobacco Company, was named on the NRA administrative committee by President Roosevelt following the resignation of Gen. Hugh Johnson.

One leader said today:

"Williams' appointment to the NRA board is a slap in the face of labor.

"Even in boom times he was working factory hands full time at $7 a week."

President Green said he was not prepared to comment on the Williams appointment "as yet."

VERTICAL UNIONS

Another bitter fight will be waged over the perennial proposal to revolutionize the A. F. L. organization on an industrial rather than a craft basis.

The late Samuel Gompers stoutly opposed substitution of "vertical" for "horizontal" unions. Green holds to the same view.

The "vertical" union proponents, however, contend that in a highly mechanized age, organization of workers is futile unless strikers have the full support of all co-workers in a given industry "from the top down."

The three "outlawed" unions may be reinstated with a proviso that they agree not to attempt to upset the present building trades administration until the next election—three years from now.

Brookline Veteran Given Silver Star

Earle W. Lancaster, Englewood avenue, Brookline, today was awarded the Silver Star by the war department for gallantry in action near St. Etienne-A-Arnes, France, October 7, 1918. According to the citation, Lancaster "displayed exceptional bravery and devotion to duty."

One O. K. in Parking War

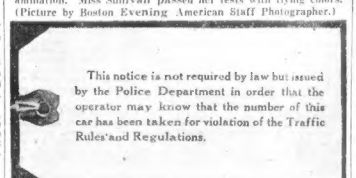
It didn't take long for Miss Rita E. Sullivan of Dorchester to be pronounced officially "OK" by police conducting a statewide check-up of automobile owners' registrations and operating licenses. More than 150,000 cars were halted for examination. Miss Sullivan passed her tests with flying colors. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)



This notice is not required by law but issued by the Police Department in order that the operator may know that the number of this car has been taken for violation of the Traffic Rules and Regulations.

Collecting these new fangled "polite" tickets for over-staying parking time is painless—until the bill is settled in court. The fine is $3 for first offenders, $5 for second offenders, and $10 for three-timers. No arrests are made until occasion number four. Then you tell it to the judge. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

300 STUDENTS GO ON STRIKE

Bridgeport, Ct., Oct. 1 (AP)—More than 300 students of the Central high school went on "strike" today for shorter hours and a one-session day. The "strikers," disbanded after James C. Moore, principal, promised a committee that the students would be given a hearing tomorrow.

Fairfield police were called when the "strikers" marched to the adjoining town and began a demonstration in front of the Roger Ludlowe high school.

NEW DEAL GETS HIGH COURT O.K.

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 1—The Supreme Court opened its fall term today by dismissing one of the five cases in which the constitutionality of the New Deal is involved—that seeking to punish East Texas Oil men on a charge of producing more than the quota allotted them by that state.

'NO FIX' LAW'S REPEAL ASKED

session of legislature to repeal the law.

Manevitch made his appeal to the Governor after filing a bill, calling for repeal of the law which went into effect today. He said:

"The Legislature made a terrible mistake in passing such a bill. It will cause untold harm if it is allowed to stand.

"I opposed the bill when it first came up and I am convinced the Legislature did not realize the harm it will cause when the bill was passed.

"It seriously will effect business in the downtown stores and by doing so, will retard business throughout the city.

"For the betterment of business and in the interest of the public, I believe the governor should call a special session of the Legislature immediately and repeal the law under emergency measures so the repeal would become effective at once."

At the same time from various parts of the state came other complaints against the new law.

In Lynn, all parking laws were abandoned today. Mayor J. Fred Manning, who is on his vacation, left word that the new system should be ignored until he returned and that traffic tags should be used as before.

Police Chief James H. Broad, however, said the tags no longer were legal and issued instructions to his men to ignore all parking violations for the day.

A movement is on in city council there to cancel all parking regulations if the new system is put into effect.

Charles E. Winslow of Stratford street, West Roxbury, was the first autoist to pay a $3 fine under the new ruling. Calling the Boston American, Winslow said:

"I went downtown to get a copy of the new regulations for a friend of mine and after I performed this 'errand of mercy,' they came up and slapped a summons on me. Can you beat that?"

Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester, former city councilor, also called upon Governor Ely to act for the repeal of the law. In a letter to the Governor he said:

"If this law is not revoked I shall expose the tremendous pressure that to my knowledge has been placed on the Boston police during the last eight months by an organization representing a small group of garage owners to tag every car parked in Boston in order to increase their garage and parking business."

Apartments May Be Made Modern by FHA Loans

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(This is the 18th of a series of articles explaining the new National Housing Act, which, under facilities developed by the Federal Housing Administration, enables home owners in Boston and other communities to obtain inexpensive, easy-to-repay loans for repairing or improving their homes.)

Modernization of apartment buildings, if wisely done, will frequently increase the income of the buildings sufficiently to pay for the improvements over a period of a few years.

Work of this sort now can be financed on reasonable terms under the new credit facilities opened up by the National Housing Act. Loans for property improvements up to $2000, repayable over a period of three and in special cases five years, can be obtained from your local bank or other financial institutions co-operating with the Federal Housing Administration.

CREDIT MUST BE GOOD

To Mrs. Anna M. K. of Cambridge:

There is nothing in the Federal Housing Act at present that affords relief for business property with an oppressive mortgage. If this were a matter of borrowing for repairs to this garage it would be possible for you to obtain a loan. The present government activities, in connection with mortgages, is for the relief of home owners who are in danger of losing their homes through foreclosure. This mortgage feature, however, is the function of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and is no part of the work of the federal housing administration.

Later the federal housing administration will go into the insurance of mortgages, but at the present time the regulations have not been made up and the future mortgage loan corporation contemplated under the Housing Act, is something that is now being developed. Announcements of the details will be made when the regulations are completed.

HOUSING EDITOR.

To Anna J. K. of Brighton:

It should be possible for you and your husband to borrow for repairs on the two houses mentioned if your credit standing is good. The fact that your taxes and mortgage payments are in good standing is decidedly in your favor. Perhaps the banks to which you have applied are not yet co-operating with the Federal Housing program.

There are other banks, however, that are co-operating and to which you may go. For instance, you may go to the following banks in Boston: Banca Commerciale Italiana of Boston, Boston Acceptance Company, Inc., Boston Morris Plan Company, the First National Bank of Boston, Forest Hills Co-operative Bank, Merchants' National Bank of Boston, National Rockland Bank of Boston, National Shawmut Bank of Boston, Second National Bank, Stable Bank and Trust Company, State Street Trust Company, the Union Trust Company of Boston, the United States Trust Company, Webster and Atlas National Bank, West Roxbury Co-operative Bank and Workingmen's Co-operative Bank. All of these banks have contracts of insurance with the Federal Housing Administration.

HOUSING EDITOR

TAX PAYMENT BARRED

To Mr. J. B. C. of South Boston:

There is no provision in the Federal Housing Act that permits the insurance of loans intended for the payment of taxes. Depending entirely on whether you are in grave distress, you may be able to get relief through the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, 150 Causeway street.

HOUSING EDITOR

To E. F. J. of Wellesley:

In the first place, your grievance has to do with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. You seem to be under a serious misapprehension as to the workings of that corporation. Bids are obtained from three contractors who must supply statements that they are reputable, and the home owner gives his signed approval to these three contractors before the work proceeds.

Appraisers for that corporation place a value that the property warrants and they cannot be influenced by the desires of home owner. The appraisal fee is not what you claim it to be. The home owner is given every consideration. Some of those whose homes are being saved for them through this corporation would not be satisfied unless the corporation made an absolute gift of the property to them.

HOUSING EDITOR.

To Elwyn H. of Castine, Me.:

It is not possible at the present time to arrange for loans for the construction of houses under the Federal Housing Administration. Regulations are now being perfected under which such loans can be made. Until these regulations are ready, I cannot advise you, although you might watch this column for further announcements.

HOUSING EDITOR.

(More letters will be answered and further details about the National Housing Act will be explained in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

SPEED SEEN AS MISHAP MATE

By Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Oct. 1—The largest primary factor in highway accidents is the mental attitude of the driver, Robert C. Eddy, director of the Massachusetts Highway Accident Survey, told the Insurance Advertising Conference here today.

Eddy, a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, supervised a survey which Governor Ely of Massachusetts asked the institute to conduct, with a view of reducing highway accidents in the state.

"A certain small number of accidents occur through untoward circumstances which the driver could not possibly foresee, Eddy reported. "All drivers maintain a margin of safety in their driving. Some a wider margin than others. The margin of safety betokens a willingness to incur delay, in the presence of a hazard, in order to avoid an accident. Thus the mental attitude of drivers is the primary factor in accidents."

Eddy reported the survey found that fatal accidents as a class, "are attended by all the earmarks of speed."

Repair Loans Open to All

Any property owner, individual, partnership or corporation may apply for a Modernization Credit Plan loan.

The loan is to be used solely for property improvement.

It may be secured at any national bank, state bank, or trust company, savings bank, industrial bank, building and loan association or finance company approved by the Federal Housing Association.

The amount of the loan may be from $100 to $2000. The note which the property-owner signs may run for any number of months, from one to five years.

The security required is that the property-owner have a regular income and a good credit record.

(If you have any problems concerning loans under the Modernization Credit Plan, write to Ruth Muggleber, Home Loan Editor, Boston Evening American.)

Woman Writer at Advertising Club

Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, editor, writer and lecturer, will address tomorrow's noonday meeting of the Advertising Club of Boston.

Mrs. Richardson has spent the greater part of her career studying women's reactions to advertising and will tell club members some of her observations.

She recently returned from a European trip which she made after two years' speaking tour of the United States.

NEW DEAL HERE TO STAY; MANY LAUD SPEECH

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Oct. 1—The New Deal, in one form or another, is here to stay—like it or not.

This was the message President Roosevelt left with the country today as telegrams piled high in the White House, recording praise and criticism of his last night's fireside chat with the people. Most of the telegrams were commendatory; a few critical.

Neither the ultra-conservatives, who have been counselling the President to swing sharply to the right, nor the leftists, who have been urging more radical experimentation, could get much solace today from Mr. Roosevelt's speech. He steered a careful middle-of-the-road course which left both groups talking each other what of the future.

The old order, Mr. Roosevelt said, is ended. The New Deal is at hand. Freely conceding that mistakes have been made, Mr. Roosevelt nevertheless made it clear that his administration intends to push ahead along lines already marked out, and through a process of trial and error, seek to arrive at the ultimate goal of the greatest good for the greatest number.

"FOR GREATER SECURITY"

The President replied, in part, to his critics, to those who have objected that much of the New Deal legislation has been unduly restrictive of individual liberty. He replied to none of his critics specifically; broadly he replied to them all. He said:

"I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer . . . that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of America."

Of the future there was much hint in Mr. Roosevelt's speech. He contended that the country, under his administration, has taken long strides in the right direction since those dark days of early 1933, when the banks were blowing up right and left.

Progress, he asserted, is being made along present lines, and the inference was that until some better lines are offered he proposes to go along the present road.

FOR INDUSTRIAL PEACE

Interspersed with this philosophic reasoning was a direct appeal to capital and labor to bury the hatchet for the time being, and pull together in a time of great national emergency.

Economic recovery, he said, has been retarded by strikes and lockouts. He declared:

"Machinery set up by the Federal Government has provided some new methods of adjustment. Both employers and employes must share the blame of not using them as fully as they should.

"The employer who turns away from impartial agencies of peace, who denies freedom of organization to his employees . . . is not fully supporting the recovery effort of his government. The workers who turn away from these same impartial agencies and decline to use their good offices to gain their ends are likewise not fully co-operating with their government.

"It is time we made a clean cut effort to bring about the united action of management and labor which is one of the high purposes of the Recovery Act. We have passed through more than a year of education. Step by step, we have created in the government agencies necessary to insure, as a general rule, industrial peace.

"These should be at least a full and fair trial given these means of ending industrial warfare."

NEW DEAL TO STAY

In accordance with these objectives, Mr. Roosevelt announced his intention of conferring in coming weeks with the spokesmen for both capital and labor. He added:

"I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts . . . and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to our industrial civilization."

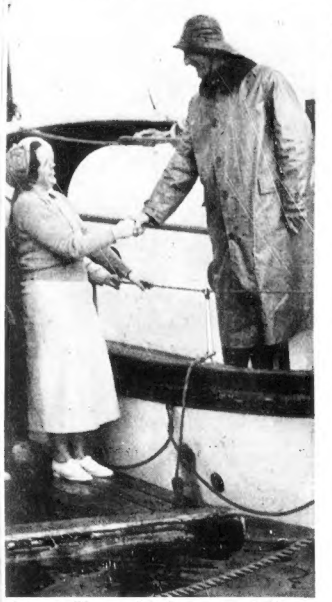
As for the broader aspects of the recovery program, the President interfered that he was reasonably well satisfied. In any undertaking so gigantic in scope, he conceded, it was only natural that mistakes should be made. These, he indicated, will be corrected as fast as they can be caught up with.

But the New Deal, as such, he emphasized, is here to stay. It may shift here and there, as the courts of trial and error proves the correctness or the incorrectness of certain theories, but in the main it is here to stay.

Harbor Island Castaways Share Rescue Thrills on Coastguard's Busy Day



Rescue expeditions are all in the day's work of Chief Boatswain's Mate George A. Joseph and his fellow coastguardsmen. But being rescued—she hopes—is a once-in-a-lifetime experience for Mrs. George Simmons of Wollaston. She has heartfelt thanks for the stalwart seamen who came to the aid of herself and six companions, adrift in a disabled power boat off Boston harbor. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

With their power boat disabled and held precariously at anchor just off the rocks of Outer Brewster Island, near Boston light, four men and three women were glad of rescue by coastguardsmen today after a long night of cold and hunger and apprehension. Included in the "castaway" party are T. Donald Adair, the host, of Newbury avenue, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rollins of East Providence; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carter of Wollaston; and Mr. and Mrs. George Simmons of Wollaston. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Skipper Charles Olson of the power boat, Roamer, gives newspaper reporters a laconic account of rescue work he directed as his little craft assisted in removal of passengers from the S. S. New Bedford, beached on Naushon Island, off Woods Hole. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

T. Donald Adair of 25 Newbury avenue, Atlantic; Mr. and Mrs. George F. Simmons of the same address; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy B. Carter of Harvard street, Wollaston, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rollins of Orchard street, East Providence — all shivering and chattering from cold.

Meanwhile, Coast Guards from the Wood End station at Provincetown and the $70,000 motorsailer Mary P. Goulart from piling up on Cape Cod after a gas line had broken.

32 MEN ABOARD

The schooner was fast drifting ashore, with 27 men aboard, when the coast guards reached her.

With Captain E. F. Negus and his crew of 40 men still aboard, the Nantucket steamer New Bedford was lying on the rocks of Naushon Island, near Woods Hole, early today, after 67 passengers had been taken off by fishing boats.

Off the coast of Nova Scotia the liner Konigstein of the Arnold Bernstein line reported a fire in her hold under control, after the blaze had threatened the 120 passengers she is carrying from Antwerp to Havre to New York. She was expected to make port safely tomorrow.

LINER HELPLESS

Helpless after losing a propeller 635 miles off the Florida coast, the Red D liner Falcon wallowed in the Atlantic swell, while the salvage tug Willett rushed at full steam to her assistance from New York. The Caraboboo of the same line was standing by the disabled steamer.

Courageous work by the crew of the New Bedford, after the best traditions of New England seamen, probably prevented loss of life as the 1116-ton liner went off her course and ripped a gaping hole in her starboard side.

While water from her punctured bottom surged about them almost neck deep, the New Bedford's engine room crew labored desperately to close water-tight bulkhead doors. Their heroism kept the rapidly sinking ship afloat long enough for Captain E. F. Negus of Nantucket to beach her on the island shore.

Meanwhile, on deck other members of the crew were reassuring passengers, and providing life jackets for every man, woman and child aboard. Perfect discipline prevailed and in spite of the heavy list, which the ship assumed as she grounded, there was no panic at any time.

COAST GUARD AIDS

Standing by was the Coast Guard 165-footer Argo, and a smaller coast guard patrol boat. A salvage tug was expected to attempt to pull the steamer off the rocks later today.

The New Bedford, 202 feet long, and built in 1928 at Quincy for the New England Steamship Company, makes the run between New Bedford, Wood's Hole, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket.

On an earlier trip she had landed a large number of returning vacationists from the islands at Woods Hole and New Bedford. The steamer was crossing Buzzards Bay on her evening trip to the islands when the crash occurred.

According to Albert Hass of Newport, R. I., superintendent of construction for the line, she was making for Woods Hole through a choppy sea and strong northwest wind at the time. A buoy which marks the channel apparently had been dragged under by the tide or swept away by the wind.

Captain Negus, on receiving reports from below that the engine room was being flooded, ordered all hands on deck.

An SOS call was immediately ordered, and Captain Negus sounded the steamer's whistle in a series of short blasts, which resounded across the waters to Naushon Island and Woods Hole. Fishing boats, tied up at nearby piers, quickly sped to the rescue.

First to reach the sinking ship was the fisherman Roamer, from Naushon, Captain Charles Olson, which took off 27 passengers, most of them women and children. Although the New Bedford had heeled down badly after coming to rest on the beach, passengers were able to leave through the lower freight ports without difficulty.

QUINCY FIGHTS YACHT FIRE

Firemen waded waist-deep into the water off the Quincy Yacht Club today to fight a $5000 blaze that broke out on the cabin cruiser Okay IV, of New York, following an explosion in her motor hatch.

J. F. Hitchcock, of the New York Athletic Club, the craft's owner, and Harry Richmond, of Atlantic Highlands, N. J., her chief officer, were aboard at the time of the blast. They leaped to the yacht club pier and then managed to pull the 20-foot boat into shallow water.

While they brought a small hose into play, a call was put in for two fire companies. The flaming ship menaced other craft in the anchorage as well as the yacht club structure.

The cruiser put in at Quincy after the America's Cup races and was being prepared for her return run to New York when the fire broke out. Her owner and yacht club authorities were at a loss to explain the origin of the blaze.

COLUMBUS DAY FEATURES SET

Elshorate Columbus Day exercises to be held on Boston Common on the afternoon of the holiday are being arranged by the committee of the Citizens' Public Celebrations Association in cooperation with Mayor Mansfield.

The Pan American features of the exercises at Parkman Bandstand will include 72 men and women in costumes and colors of those lands, and flag bearers in uniform.

In a formal ceremony at the beginning of the program the flags of each country will be saluted, national airs played by the band, and a picturesque group formed on the platform. Columbus, aided by two pages will greet the representatives as they arrive.

The musical portions of the program will come from the Greater Boston E. R. A. choral unit.

Mayor Mansfield will welcome local diplomats, representatives of the South and Central American countries as well as representatives of Spain, Italy and this country.

Store Milk Price Jumps to 11 Cents

$625 Gems Stolen in Swampscott

Swampscott police today were seeking the burglar who broke into the home of Charles I. McCarthy, Somerville store owner, of Puritan road, Swampscott, yesterday, and made off with loot valued at more than $625.

The loot included a $500 diamond ring, a $75 bracelet, 45 in cash and vases and linen handkerchiefs. Mrs. McCarthy told police that she suspected a gypsy woman.

U. S. Sales Tax Proposed to Eliminate Double-Taxing

A federal manufacturers' tax on all goods except foods, and an equitable distribution and coordination of inheritance taxes between federal and state governments were proposed by the Interstate Commission on Conflicting Taxes today in its meeting at the Hotel Statler.

Commissioner Mark Graves, president of the New York State Tax Commission, and one of the two sponsors of the federal manufacturers' tax, said:

"I believe that it is the unequal distribution of the tax load as much as its size that is retarding recovery, depriving business and breeding unemployment.

"We have reached the point where the federal government cannot ignore state and local taxing systems, and conversely, local and state taxes must take into account federal taxes in planning their own taxes."

Senator Franklin S. Edmonds of Pennsylvania, in proposing his five per cent manufacturers' sales tax said:

"Governmental units are trying to find too many new fields of taxation. Also, many fields are taxed by two or more units of government. This proposal of the manufacturers' sales tax eliminates the difficulties of taxing retail outlets by states. The Federal Government would collect the whole tax and turn 50 per cent of it over to the states."

Roosevelt Confers on Silver Problem

Washington, Oct. 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt today conferred Secretarie Hull and Morgenthau to the White House for a conference on the recently received reply from China protesting against the American silver purchase program.

Death of Girl Kills Father

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 1—Joseph Donohue, 52, and his blue-eyed daughter, Veronica, 19, will be buried side-by-side in Calvary cemetery, Wednesday after high requiem mass in St. Francis Xavier church.

It is so fitting a burial as these two could have . . . Little Veronica, youngest of Donohue's four daughters and his favorite, who died of pneumonia, and the father who fell dead on hearing that she had died.

"She's dead, Joseph."

These three words, pronounced by Donohue's wife as Donohue walked into the sitting room of his home, were his death sentence. For a moment he trembled, then pitched forward, dead.

DUCE SETS RULE FOR WOMEN

By Associated Press

In a world in which old foundations are shaking and revolutions are chasing each other across the front pages, how are women faring?

Answers to this question were sought from the foreign bureaus of the Associated Press. Here is the answer in Italy:

Rome, Oct. 1—Women under the regime of Premier Benito Mussolini are subjected daily to a tremendous bombardment of propaganda divided under four headings:

1—Get married young.
2—Have children, many of them.
3—Create Italian styles and buy Italian clothes.
4—Have an Italian figure, that is, be of the Mae West type. The slim woman is derided as a Dona Crisi (woman of the crisis) because it is believed she is not a child-bearer.

HELPS SUPPORT FAMILY

To facilitate marriages the government protects newlyweds' jobs, gives them almost free honeymoons and distributes liberal dowries.

To enable women to marry young the law has been amended to permit girls of 16 to wed without the consent of their parents.

To encourage child bearing, the government contributes to the support of large families.

Fascism rigidly protects the family. Divorce is not permitted. Legal separations are possible, but may be obtained only with much difficulty.

The cause of suffrage for women is dead in Italy, and women have less chance to obtain the vote under Mussolini than they ever had.

NO OFFICE FOR WOMEN

In government circles it is said that the premier's opinion with reference to women in politics has not changed since his newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, Milan, said in an editorial seven years ago:

"We deny women the right to stand for election to political posts. We believe feminism to be one of the many democratic aberrations of the civil and political life of our times."

Although some slight progress has been made toward personal emancipation, Italian women are still well-guarded beings who, unless they are of the lower classes, do not go out on the streets alone. They are hedged in by conventions that an American woman would find it difficult to support. They do not go into business and very few are in the professions.

HOGSETT MINUS PRISON AIDS

Closely following the sudden death of Deputy Warden Herman L. Godendorf, 65, of Charlestown State Prison, Captain Thomas F. Brassil, veteran deputy warden, was pensioned today, leaving Warden James L. Hogsett without an assistant.

To fill the breach, the warden promoted Correctional Officer Edward W. Loring, for more than 30 years attached to the prison, to the post of assistant deputy warden, in which office he will be acting deputy until a successor to Godendorf can be appointed.

Captain Brassil, an overseas war veteran with the Yankee Division, had been attached to the State Prison for 23 years and for the past 11 years had been assistant deputy warden. He had been on sick leave since May 15.

Funeral services for Deputy Godendorf will be held Wednesday, from his home, 89 Austin street, Charlestown, with the Rev. David Fraser, pastor of the Somerville Congregational Church, officiating.

Kill that COLD!

Don't Merely Coddle It With Half-Way Measures!

A cold is nothing to trifle with! It may end seriously. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for an internal treatment. It also calls for a COLD remedy and not something good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is direct and fast—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is sold by all druggists, 30c and 60c. Accept no substitute.

This Ear—That Air

By N. F. T.

Increasing demands for choice time spots every evening, as visited upon Boston radio stations by the big rich network sponsor clientele, is coming to be a discouraging state of affairs among local program planners.

A certain well-known arranger of air attractions hereabouts even begins to feel that it will become more and more difficult to interest Boston prospects in putting up adequate pay dirt to present competitive doings. Since famous comedians and celebrated concert soloists are capturing the lucrative gasoline, tooth paste and laxative contracts, attempting to win the air audience away from such high-priced performers, isn't an easy matter to contemplate. True enough, yet there are already some worth while Boston broadcasts in the wind. Why not more? Quite naturally, staging good shows means maintaining a constant and conscientious search for new material and talent. Also it will require the expending of added program preparation, effort and money.

Topnotch ideas, well worked out, rarely fail to topple over buyers. Station managements apparently depend on the good old organ entirely too much, if they'll take my well meaning word for what many a listener has been reporting over a considerable period of time.

FLEETING FLASHES

Jimmy (Schnozz) Durante, he who is known to be deliberately awkward, bids the air audience adieu last night in a way that would rather be expected of the smooth tongued Tony Wens . . . Will Rogers, just back from abroad, took ample opportunity to laud his two staunch friends, Fred Stone and President Roosevelt . . . Quite a roller, Mr. Rogers! . . . Fanny Weeks, the popular young Scott Fisher's music into a new RKO frolic feature to fill the WBZ waves each Monday, beginning today at 11:15, with Jack Goldstein in the ceremony master role . . . WNEK, the new local station winning a way and occupying studios in the Hotel Manger . . . Graham McNamee will give a "crowd description" preamble and between innings summary comments during the World Series broadcasts, but Ford Bond has been assigned to the play-by-play impression of the games. Some say that like Babe Ruth, this is the last baseball reporting for radio's most colorful mistake maker.

THE PEOPLE SPEAK UP ON ALE

They All Want It Fully Aged

THOSE HARVARD ADS SURE OPENED MY EYES—Says Alice J. Noonan, secretary, Dorchester, Mass. "The first time I read one of those Harvard ads about "green ale" I thought maybe it was just bunk. Then I decided to try Harvard. Compared to ordinary ale, there's as much difference as between day and night. Harvard not only tastes better—but you feel a whale of a lot better afterwards."

WHY WOULD I RATHER HAVE HARVARD? THAT'S AN EASY ONE—Exclaims Pasquale Lanciano of 107 Pleasant Street, Hartford, Conn. "I'll put it this way—would you order hamburger if you could get a nice, juicy steak for the same money? Well, to my taste, there's just as much difference between ordinary ale and Harvard Ale. Harvard has that fully aged flavor that makes a fellow know he's getting the real thing."

THOSE HARVARD PEOPLE SURE DO THINGS RIGHT—"I've known for a long time," says Abraham Bloom, tailor, Dorchester, Mass., "that Harvard Ale tastes better—and now that I've seen how Harvard is aged, I can understand why. Harvard is aged twice as long as ordinary ale. They have almost 20,000,000 glasses aging every day. You bet there's no danger of getting green ale when you ask for Harvard."

EVEN A COLOR-BLIND MAN CAN TELL THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN GREEN ALE AND HARVARD—Says Dol Brissete, popular orchestra leader, Worcester, Mass. "I suppose I have introduced Harvard Ale to literally hundreds of my friends. And once they meet a glass of Harvard—it's thumbs down on green, unaged ale. New Englanders just seem to be born with a taste for fully aged ale—and the only way they can be sure of getting it is to ask for Harvard."

WHERE TO GET IT—To make sure of always getting genuine fully aged Harvard Ale, look for this sign and tell 'em, "I'd rather have Harvard."

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Katherine stands gazed as Madge and Lillian institute a thorough search for the mysterious bottle, hidden by Avis Arlen.

I MUST HAVE imagined that Katherine's eyes were evasive when I spoke of Baby Faith. That was the conviction that came to me as she countered my query with another.

"Where did you get that stuff—I can't leave her?" she asked scornfully, but in the same low tone I had used. "She's perfectly all right, sleeping like a little soldier. I'm at your service for any kind of work, gumshoe or otherwise."

"Then I want you to stand out here where you can command a view of both ends of the hall." I told her hurriedly. "Lillian and I will be in the bathroom here, with the door ajar so we can hear you. If Miss Avis Arlen comes into view, or you hear anything of her, cough three times loudly."

"I get you Stevenson," she said with a grin.

"I'll tell you all about it as soon as I can get my breath," I told her, and then I dashed back to Lillian and we entered the bathroom, leaving the door ajar.

"I'm probably crazy," I told Lillian.

"That point being established, go on," she said.

THE HIDDEN BOTTLE

"When Avis started dressing," I began, "she asked us all to go out of the room, saying it made her nervous to have anybody watch her prink. I told her I would stay outside if she needed anything, but she entreated me prettily to go downstairs. Instead I went—around the corner, and a minute later Avis came out and got as far as the door of your room when I hailed her, as if I were unsuspecting. She said she had forgotten where the bathroom was.

"I indicated this one, and she came in here. She was carrying a bottle, and she hurriedly thrust it into the folds of her kimono when I spoke to her. When she came out again I pretended to be reading and not to notice her, but she had no bottle with her, I am sure. Ergo—"

"Ergo," Lillian said, going to the other side of the room, "you take that side and I'll take this, and we'll eliminate."

But when we had gone over every inch of space in the room, including a search of the soiled towels in the hamper, we found nurseives without a single trace of the bottle I was sure Avis had hidden in the room.

"Perhaps she emptied its contents and threw the bottle out of the window, hoping to retrieve it later," I suggested.

AN UNSUCCESSFUL SEARCH

"Not she," Lillian said decidedly. "Too foxy by far—and too determined. If she had any plan for that bottle and its contents, depend upon it, she hasn't yet given it up. How about outside the window?"

"We can try it," I said. "Look!" I added excitedly, "the screening in this corner has been forced away."

"That's the answer, no doubt," she said, "It's probably outside on the ledge. Your hand's smaller than mine; you try it. But be careful you don't scream if—"

I put my hand gingerly through the aperture, felt around, then drew it back, ruefully shaking my head.

"No good," I said. "She undoubtedly tried that scheme, but the ledge she could reach was too narrow, and try as I might, I couldn't reach the broader shelf through that hole."

"Well, if you couldn't, she couldn't," Lillian said vindictively. "Her hand is like a ham. But what's that on your sleeve?"

She reached out her hand and took a tiny piece of torn fabric from my sleeve. I recognized it instantly—a raveling from the kimono Avis Arlen had worn!

"That makes it unanimous," Lillian said. "She tried to hide the thing outdoors, then she found some other place. Let's sit down and go into the silence for a minute until we get it."

She sat down, put her elbows on her knees and cupped her chin in her hands in the attitude I know so well.

"I'll bet I have it!" she said triumphantly.

Acknowledge a Legacy

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you be good enough to tell me what style of letter should be written thanking for or rather acknowledging a legacy? The legacy has been left an employe by his employer. The son is the executor, and has notified the person of the legacy. This was done in person. The legacy will have to be acknowledged when it is received, and there is a question as to how it should be done, and the proper wording. What would you say?

Your note of acknowledgment might read something like this:

Dear Mr. Lane: I have just received your father's kind legacy to me, about which you so graciously told me some time ago.

I am deeply touched by your father's goodness and generosity to me, and by your interest and friendliness concerning it. It is not often that such a fine gift of friendship is made by an employer to an employe, and your father's kind thought makes me very proud and very determined to "carry on" the ideal and inspiration that he gave to all who worked with him and observed the grand way he lived his life. I hope that in this way, as well as the way in which I tried to serve him while he lived, that I shall in some small measure deserve his goodness to me.

Thank you again for your courtesy, and all good wishes to you.

Yours very sincerely.

CLEANSER REFRESHING AS RAINDROPS IS EXCELLENT FOR YOUNG SKINS

Good Lines Made by Firm Foundations

Below, a lace-topped all-in-one for the heavier figure, with a back cut to accommodate backless gowns. The two figures below it, left and center, show a step-in all-in-one with a lace top, webbed strips and bones to the waist.

The brassiere and girdle, below, is double-knit for greater support and smoother lines.

White satin lastex, run-proof, makes the exceptionally low back girdle right. Elastic keeps it form fitting, including the adjustable uplift brassiere.

Directly left, a knitted girdle with special curve control, and a lace brassiere.

By BRUNELLA WOOD

THE PENCIL LINE silhouette which will dictate styles for October brides, demands in no uncertain tones foundation garments that will control natural contours. One might suppose, wearily, that anything able to do that would necessarily be armored and harsh —but corset designers have been more clever than that.

You can get simple girdles, about as large as baby hands which stretch amazingly on the figure, but which are double-knit at strategic points to keep unwanted bumps out of sight. And if the figure is really past the aid of any knitted foundation—which might easily be through muscular fitness instead of the flabby kind—quite alluring all-in-ones have sternly boned sections which will do the trick aesthetically.

The lace touch is well handled in the latest foundation garments. It has come to the point, indeed, where many a woman making her dressier toilette wears no slip or step-ins over her prettily trimmed all-in-one foundation.

Sports clothes require a different type of girdle than elaborate gowns, and the garterless pantie-girdle is the answer for many active girls. It is made of two-way stretch fabric with a double-knitted back section, and light reinforcements at the front keep it snug around the waistline.

Meat Buying Shopping Guide

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

HOW TO CHOOSE the best cut of meat for the purpose is a problem which confronts not only the new homemaker, but also the one who wants to enlarge her repertoire of meat dishes.

The first step, according to Inez S. Willson, well-known home economist, is the choice of a kind of meat dish. Shall it be a steak or a stew? A nd sometimes this choice is governed by the size of the food budget. The less-demanded cuts are in most cases cooked by moist heat—that is, by braising, stewing, or cooking in water—while those in greater demand are the ones cooked by dry heat as in roasting or broiling.

Below are listed cuts of meat which are suitable for the different methods of cooking. You will find this a convenient shopping guide when buying meat. Why not cut this list out and paste it in the front of your most used cook book for ready reference?

ROASTING

Beef: Standing rib, rolled rib, tenderloin and sirloin tip.

Lamb: Leg, rib, loin, shoulder, breast.

Pork: Loin, ham, shoulder, spare ribs.

Veal: Leg, shoulder, loin.

TIME TABLE FOR ROASTING

Beef—Rare, 15-20 minutes per pound; medium, 22-25 minutes per pound; well done, 27-30 minutes per pound.

Pork—Fresh, 20 minutes per pound; ham, 10-12 lbs., 25 minutes per pound; ham, larger, 20 minutes per pound; half hams, 30 minutes per pound.

Lamb—Well done, 30-35 minutes per pound; medium done, 25-30 minutes per pound.

Veal—25 minutes per pound.

BROILING OR PANBROILING

(Cooking in broiler pan or hot skillet without adding fat.)

Beef: Porterhouse, sirloin, or club steaks.

Lamb: Rib, loin, or shoulder chops.

Pork: Tenderloin.

COOKING IN WATER

(Commonly called "boiling," but really cooked in a large quantity of water at a simmering temperature.)

Beef: Plate, brisket, shank, short ribs, corned beef.

Lamb: shoulder, leg.

Pork: Ham, shoulder.

Potent New Lotion Containing Distilled Rain Water Clears Up Skin Blemishes

POSED BY VERREE TEASDALE

By Juliet Shelby

WONDERS never cease—that is, since dermatologists the world over have been bending their best efforts toward discovering new marvels to make our skins more beautiful. One that has come to my attention is so particularly excellent that I greet it with loud cheers.

This innovation is the perfect liquid cleanser. Although it is as gentle and as refreshing as rain water, it has a strong antiseptic action. Another amazing thing about this cleanser is that it is equally beneficial to all types of skins. If your skin is oily, it will thoroughly cleanse the over-oily pores.

For the dry skin it has stimulating qualities that tend to normalize the sluggish circulation. For the normal skin you will find it swell for removing your creams and toning up the skin.

What I wish to particularly emphasize is the use of this cleanser for your skins. How well I know the embarrassment that comes to so many young people, both girls and boys, from unsightly skin blemishes.

Every parent should see that their teen age children have a bottle of this preparation. Its strong antiseptic and cleansing properties will really prevent and correct pimples, blackheads and other blemishes which, if allowed to remain, often cause acne.

Since the liquid contains distilled rain water, it is soothing and softening to the skin, even while it thoroughly cleanses all impurities from the pores.

If you wish to learn the name of this new liquid cleanser, and where it may be purchased, phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Youthful Version of Tailleur

PATTERN 9075

It doesn't matter to this young lady whether she's coming or going —she knows she's just as attractive either way you look at her in this youthful version of the son's smart tailored dress. The double breasted bodice is as chic as chic can be, finished at the neck with trim revers. And there is plenty of room for play provided by the inverted pleats in the back as well as in the front of the skirt. Make it up in wool or cotton. Plaids seem to be particularly dear to the schoolgirl's heart. We'd suggest something very new in buttons for trimming—perhaps metal or wood.

Question: What can you recommend for freckles on my face and hands. They have resisted every treatment I have already tried. Please help me.

R. D., Newton

Answer: For stubborn cases of freckles make a creamy paste of three tablespoonfuls of powdered pumice and sufficient peroxide. Smooth this over your hands and let it dry. Wash off with plenty of cold water.

Dark Circles

Question: I am only thirty years old and I already have deep, dark hollows and fine lines under my eyes. Can you prescribe anything for me?

T. C., So. Boston

Answer: The hollows under your eyes may be caused by lack of sleep. Try to get at least nine hours of sleep every night. Dip the cushion tips of the index and middle fingers in your cream or oil and, with a gentle circling motion, smooth the mixture around the eyes. Begin with fingers placed on each side of the bridge of the nose. Travel upward, circle the eyebrows, around the temples, and down across the cheeks to the nose again.

SATURDAY'S ANSWERS

Unfair to Saddle Player with 'Take the Charge'

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Because of the widespread popularity of Contract Bridge, many new words have come into common usage, and many old words have acquired new meanings particularly applicable at the Bridge table. We are all familiar with the terms such as "cross-ruff," "bust," "lay-down," and "out on a limb." Another, which may be less familiar is "take the charge," which means simply to take the blame.

Although the question is a close one, I do not think South should be saddled with the "charge" for failing to make his contract on the following hand—even though the contract could have been fulfilled:

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 ♡ | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 2 N T | Pass | 3 ♠ | Pass |
| 4 ♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

The above bidding needs no comment except that North, with a very doubtful diamond stopper, quite correctly decided to raise his partner's spades after the latter had rebid the suit, rather than try for game in notrump.

Against the four-spade contract West made the innocuous opening of the club Ten. South saw that the hand contained two sure diamond losers and that he would fulfil his contract only if he could restrict his losses in the spade suit to one.

Generally when one's trump combination contains nine cards and lacks in high cards only the King and the Queen, the percentages favor, by a very small margin, taking two finesses in the suit up to the Ace rather than playing for either a 2-2 drop or the drop of a blank honor by laying down the Ace. This line of play will lose only when the King-Queen blank are over the Ace. On the other hand, it will win in those instances where the King-Queen, either once or twice guarded, are under the Ace.

Thus at first glance it would seem that South's correct line of play was to win the first trick with the Ace of clubs in his own hand, lead the Ten of Spades and let it ride.

However, there was one difficulty with this normal line of play. South had only one sure entry to his hand—the club Ace—and to take two finesses he needed two entries. The only way he could develop a second entry was to lay down the Ace and King of hearts and ruff the third heart in his own hand, but this play, of course, would run the risk of the third heart being over-ruffed by West—a possibility not at all remote. South finally decided (and, as I mentioned above, I agree with the decision despite its unfortunate result) that the slight additional percentage in favor of taking two finesses rather than playing for the drop was offset by the danger of an over-ruff in returning to the South hand.

So South led the spade Ten, which the West player quite wisely did not cover, and played the Ace from Dummy. After this play South's cause was entirely hopeless. He could not avoid the loss of two spade tricks and two diamond tricks and his contract was defeated 1 trick.

DAUGHTERS OF VENUS

By Robert Terry Shannon

Von Guerdon was as good as his word—he knew how to be patient. Juliet sat in several conferences with him and Madame Hubert the following week and his attitude was studiously polite.

Once, when they met alone in one of the great carpeted corridors he asked her to have dinner with him, but she refused. Her excuse was that she was extremely busy furnishing and decorating the smart apartment she had taken in the fashionable Wilshire district.

As it turned out, Juliet had never occupied the recovery suite at the Institute but had found next day a place that suited her perfectly. The rent was high but so was her salary. For the first time in her life she was creating a home of her own and she had, recklessly, spent all of her surplus on the furnishings.

NEW AND DIFFICULT

"But you will dine with me some time?" Von Guerdon persisted hopefully.

"Yes, I'd be glad to," Juliet told him vaguely.

Von Guerdon knew she was fending him off, but he took it calmly.

"Remember, I am very patient," he said with a wry smile. "I'll ask you again before long."

O'Hara still stuck like a burr in her mind and conscience. Fortunately she did not have to face him the morning after their feverish night because he was still confined to bed. When he was able to be up he slipped away to Palm Springs for a couple of weeks' rest.

"While he's gone," Madame Hubert had told her, "you'll have an opportunity to master his duties. His secretary will show you everything."

The secretary, a dull bespectabled girl, did not know everything. Before she realized it, Juliet was up to her neck in orders and deliveries and letters to jobbers.

It was all new and difficult but she poured such a wealth of energy into the long hours that the furnishing of the new home was abandoned half finished. Caught up in a revolving machine of work, sleep, eat and fatigue, she had no time even to go to a picture show.

Once, due to inexperience, she was responsible for a freighter of facial cream being shipped to New Orleans instead of Chicago, and she was awake 24 hours before the mistake was straightened out. In this catastrophe McSpadden was her only consolation. He let her weep on his shoulder and sent flowers from his garden for her desk.

Tearfully and expecting to be discharged, she went to Madame Hubert and confessed.

"It's nothing," said that remarkable woman. "One mistake I can overlook. If it happens again, my dear, you'll be discharged."

Juliet rushed back to the mailroom of O'Hara's duties. The vision of the freight car wandering through Texas cactus was something she never forgot. Her brain clarified, her caution redoubled, and before O'Hara returned, his department was operating like a brisk and steady clock.

On the day of his return she dreaded their first encounter. It was going to be difficult, but she fortified herself with strong determination and marched straight to his office.

"Darling!"

The endearment leaped from his lips as he sprang from his desk and came around.

His face was tanned, his eyes clear. Instead of the old nettled sullenness his face radiated renewed health and his joy danced in the blue eyes. She was caught up in a close embrace and kissed hard on the mouth. But there was no response in her lips and her arms hung loosely at her sides until he had finished.

"Please," she said a bit breathlessly, "sit down. I want to tell you something."

His gaze was still shining upon her; the smile was not yet gone from his lips.

"That sounds bad—"

"We might as well get everything straight right away," Juliet's voice was level and friendly. "The kisses and the rest of it—that's all finished. I've been worrying about it all the time you were gone, and I want to be perfectly definite about it. I made a fool of myself that night. I lost my head—and it probably wasn't fair to you. It will not happen again—it will not even begin to happen again—"

O'Hara's smile was still in place but it wobbled slightly.

"All right—you've had your little joke," he said. "Now come over here and kiss me again."

"I'm not going to kiss you again —now or ever," she told him quickly. "It's all off—through—finished. There is nothing against you—but I don't feel that way about you."

The dancing light had gone from his eyes; they were no longer blue but mere slits of darkest night through his narrowed lids.

"It was just an evening out for you, eh? Was that the way of it?"

"Oh, don't make it sound so cheap," Juliet implored. "I was afraid you wouldn't understand. I don't go around doing that sort of thing—something I wasn't able to control rushed me off my feet. It wasn't my real self. It was being tired and excited and alone with you in the night."

She wasn't telling him the full truth. It had been because of O'Hara's fatal resemblance to her dead sweetheart that Juliet had lost her head. But she couldn't tell him this. It was too intimate, too secret to reveal.

"Well, you had me fooled all right," said O'Hara grimly. "I thought you were on the square."

"I am on the square," cried Juliet. "That's why I can't go on with it. This job I have here is the best chance I ever had in my life. It means everything—it's escape from the worry and poverty and all the scrummy little dragdowns that make life foul. I've been through it all. That's why I can't afford to lose it all by getting into a messy affair. The two things simply won't mix—"

"Oh, I'm not going to interfere with your circus and artichokes," O'Hara put in.

"And you didn't mean it, either!" Juliet rushed on. "You were sick, feverish—in a delirium. Half the time you didn't know what you were saying."

"Oh, didn't I?" He opened a desk drawer, produced a tiny plush casket and pressed a spring. "Here's how much I meant it—say that I was."

In the palm of his hand was the fiery glint of a square-cut diamond, and beside it the white narrow band of a marriage ring.

SPEAKS BITTERLY

"But I'm glad to know how you feel," he said out of his blackness. "I'd rather learn it now than later." He dropped the useless things into his desk and shut them away. "But, it's all right—I know when I've been kidded."

A parody of a smile flicked on his lips. It was the last semblance of geniality she saw from him until that other girl, Katie Schmidt, strolled into both their lives.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon when Juliet walked out of O'Hara's office. An hour later came the ominous request to report at once to Madame Hubert. The usual smile was missing from the blue-uniformed page boy who brought the message.

Before she left her own beautiful office with its mauve brocades and silk hangings, Juliet took a last look around. Her job, she felt, hung by a thread. With O'Hara

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pale, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly peppy and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels each day.

If that bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in your bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You have a sick, bad taste and your breath is foul; skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1934 C. M. Co.

NEW ENGLAND MARKS BUSINESS GAIN

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

I have recently collected a couple of stories on the employment situation which seem to me highly significant.

Robert E. Rogers

Some friends of mine in a Boston suburb were making those home improvements that seem to come naturally at the beginning of fall. They decided to discard an old combination coal and gas stove and put in a new gas stove with an automatic hot water heater in the cellar. For a day the house swarmed with men, plumbers and stove men. The plumbers were polite, efficient, and willing. The stove men were slow, noisy, impertinent, nursing, apparently, a perpetual grouch.

It had been agreed by the company that the old stove could be carried down into the cellar. When the moment came the stove men struck.

"It wasn't our business." They weren't going to. It was too heavy for three men and ordinary cook stoves. They weren't told to do it. They were, colloquially speaking, organized to do work, I do it.

The head plumber, who had not been long enough over from the old country to be spoiled by the notions of American labor, remarked with scorn: "What's the matter with them? I could do it myself."

But the owner of the house telephoned to the manager and I want to know about the kind of labor he was employing. The manager was plainly apparently afraid to offend his own workers.

"I am sorry," he said.

The woman of her temper "Don't she replied. "I can get men who have been starving for months and years and will be glad to get a job."

Three more men were sent in presumably under the threat of instant dismissal. They, too, balked. The same reply from the owner. Manager of the company "I am sorry."

The woman of her temper again. "Do pick up that stove right away and take it down stairs—all. I want to have no more trouble of the way about it."

And so it took the stove down stairs—three men in all, getting paid for doing calling upon the Master's men, and even to lift the heavy thing. Unless in that time some one of those men, in his own home, pyramid and handed out the keys from servers.

The moral is obvious. Unemployment on the one side, while a fine young man wandering young fellow will have to wait for months and months before he can get down to work. He employer other men to handle jobs of gardening and removal, furnace tending, and general odd jobs. But "They're all right at me now. I could have a good many old men to find the men. But you can't find any young men to do work. I have to keep waiting from one to the other, while waiting on the job."

And earlier in the summer I manager of a large one up in the White Mountains, and one of the guests and I were discussing how hard it was to get help. I said I had a friend, and from our agency. The jobs were reduced to waiting on tables. The young men applied were all young fellows of college age, and were looking for a good summer job. They would be willing to work for a few weeks during the summer and then go back to school.

The old man who, on Saturday night, would get a night's rest, would be waiting on tables and then set the bell and as soon as he was smoking. The college boys who looked on a summer job as a vacation, long before the season was over, left in higher religion. Less and less.

We recommended to that manager that he do with a man for girl. In a way that was the advantage of experience. With a waiter or waitress of that kind I don't care how much he is paid of the days, the inexperienced and the green are passers, and keep buying until they find people they can depend on. Long before the summer season but and I repeat it, laughs in the face boring he'll try to find who deserve jobs and can handle jobs. The fitness the sub-human will be on the hunch of a holiday at the polls, expensive. Surely, yes, but not so easy to have men working.

SHARP ADVANCE ON SEASONAL TREND SEEN

CONSTRUCTION GAINS

"The daily average value of new construction contracts awarded in this district during August was 86 per cent less than July, and over 38 per cent below the value of new awards in August 1933.

For the first half of September, however, an improvement occurred in the daily value of new contracts undertaken in New England, with a rise of almost 25 per cent in the daily average amount of new awards as compared with the average during August.

Daily average volume of cotton consumption in August was 500 bales, as compared with 415 bales in July and 4218 bales in August, 1933.

Although the daily volume of cotton consumption in August this year was decidedly lower than in the same month a year ago the increase of 109 per cent between July and August was contrary to usual expectations, and resulted in a rise of more than five points in the seasonally adjusted index.

PAUL DEAN

Down the stretch of the fight for the National League title the alleged team rebels, Paul and Dizzy Dean, pitched their heads off to bring the Cards the crown. The strong Cardinals' infield was one of the team's main assets in winning the National League flag. And it makes the club close to an even bet in the World Series, which opens on Wednesday at Detroit. Third Baseman Martin, Shortstop Durocher, Second Baseman Frisch and First Sacker Collins form a powerful quartet. Martin was the series hero in 1931, when the Cards downed the Athletics. The others are seasoned toilers. They will make the Tigers step, in the classic.

There's only one Dizzy Dean, and here he is serving one of his winning pitches during the Cards conquering sprint down the season's stretch. Manager Bucky Harris will see the game in Detroit, being on his way home to Washington to celebrate the wedding anniversary [illegible] but if the series goes home to Detroit from St. Louis, he plans to see the finish.

The Red Sox finished with a percentage of .500, winning 76 games and losing the same number. The Braves did slightly better, winning 78 and dropping 71. Both finished fourth.

Plenty of wagers were made on the race between the local entries. In most cases, percentage settled a place tie and the Tribal followers won.

SHARES HEAVY AT CLOSE OF MARKET

New York, Oct. 1—The stock and commodity markets sold off sharply today.

In the stock market liquidation was evident from the opening, to leave losses running more than 2 points in the pivotal leaders.

The decline in the market coincided with the assumption of stock market control by the Securities and Exchange commission.

RAILS HIT

Railroad shares were among the most conspicuous weak spots today, both showing sizeable points. The general uneasiness was aggravated in the case of the rails by the abandonment over the weekend of the carriers' plea for a freight rate increase, which was promptly opposed by 25 state railroad commissions.

J. I. Case, International Harvester and the small order stocks were offered freely in the final hour and sold down more than 2 points.

The setting in the farm shares appeared to be in sympathy with the weakness in the grain markets.

An unexpected decline in steel operations had a banish effect on the industrial shares, when the United States Steel and Bethlehem lost more than 2 points each.

TECHNICAL FACTORS

In view of the fact that stocks have shown an advancing trend for the past week or so, various market analysts were inclined to attribute today's reaction partly to technical factors.

It was not so much what the President said but what he left unsaid that seemed to bring disappointment to some in the financial district. Hopes had been expressed that the chief executive would give some clue as to the extent of government spending, the methods to be used in balancing the budget and the eventful stens which might be taken toward currency stabilization.

At the same time it was pointed out by some commentators that Mr. Roosevelt probably was unable to give any information at this time about the negotiations which have been perturbing the financial community. The budget, it was argued, will depend upon the lightening of the national relief burden, while monetary stabilization cannot be effected pending clarification of conditions both at home and abroad.

The Presidents plan for a labor truce was described as "more hillish than otherwise" by one Wall Street broker. The reiteration of approval of system of fair profits for business and industry was also well received. The reference in the speech to discouraging "unhappy efforts to get rich quickly by speculating in securities" was not particularly heartening to the commission houses where idle days are running in the "red" because of public apathy to stocks.

The transfer of the securities exchanges to full federal control was thought to have been largely discounted, as stock exchange members for some time had been preparing to operate under the new regulations.

Mass Public Works Bonds Awarded

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley today awarded to F. I. Putnam & Co., Inc., and Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of New York city, $4,000,000 Massachusetts Emergency Public Works Loan bonds, bearing interest at the rate of 2¼ per cent.

The state will receive over and above the $4,000,000 the sum of $19,480 of the premium. There were 57 bids and firms participated in the sale of bidders. The state treasurer said that the low rate of interest is another evidence of the high credit standing of the state.

In order to facilitate the computation of margins under the regulations of the Security Exchange Act, the Boston Evening American now carries the low since July 1, 1933, instead of the low for the year. The Securities Exchange Act provides that until July 1, 1936, the lowest price at which a security has sold since July 1, 1933, shall be considered as the lowest market price in the preceding 36 months. After July 1, 1936, the Act provides that the lowest price in the preceding 36 months will form the basis for margin computation.

COOK-COOS
by Ted Cook

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

KEEP THIS HANDY CHART TACKED NEXT TO YOUR HEART

The above chart is very convenient right now, when candidates are rushing around, shaking hands and inadvertently revealing their true characters. All you have to do is let them fall into your trap.

If the candidate gives you the two-finger shake (upper left), step back quickly, tip your hat and say, "I don't mind telling you, sir, that in my opinion you are a snob and unfit for the office you seek."

If the candidate gives you the limp or wet-washrag (sometimes called the dead fish) shake, you can exclaim, "Oh, but I hardly think I could give my Australian secret ballot vote to one who is half-hearted, lukewarm. Your handshake satisfies me that you have a backbone of spaghetti—you are not a red-blooded man. In your veins flows dish water." Turn on the heel, fore him backwards, and give the coattails a smart flip. He'll understand.

But when a candidate extends you the Blacksmith's Special, and grips your hand as in a vise, causing you to writhe, squirm and with difficulty refrain from crying out in pain, know, then, that you have at last met a wholesouled, generous and warm-hearted person. Plant your feet firmly and try to bring him to his knees, or—if you like such fun and feel equal to it—give a strong, sudden jerk and see if you can free yourself. If you can disengage his arm at the shoulder socket so much the better. It's all in fun, and what have you got to lose?

"I very much fear that Upton Sinclair's election would prove a tragedy to the cause of radicalism," says Norman Thomas, Socialist leader.

That's what all radicals seem to be afraid of—some other radical's election.

In fact, it makes voters a mite suspicious. Radicals are always afraid one radical in office will glut the market.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

What fabric of lies is this, my good woman?

15,000 A&P Stores Open 75th Birthday Fete

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company today announced plans for its 75th anniversary celebration. This company started in 1859 as a single store on Vesey street, New York. Today its anniversary sale will be celebrated by 90,000 employes in 15,000 stores, serving six million customers a day.

J. T. Patten, the oldest living member of the organization today gave a graphic account of the company's growth. He said:

"My first job with A & P was in May 1875. The company was then 16 years old and had only 12 stores, but a large mail order business.

"At the first store in which I worked we sold only tea and coffee.

"A year later I was moved to 534 street on Eighth avenue. In 1876 this was the farthest north the company had reached. In this store we sold tea, coffee and sugar. To this store many farmers used to come from the country that is north of 59th street to do their ordering for several weeks."

"I have lived in the greatest 75 years of the world's history. Never before in history has there been a period of such constant and rapid change.

"Customers began to depend on the new canned foods, on fresh vegetables summer and winter, on individually packaged foods instead of bulk. Retailing grew up with America — every development in American life had its effect on our business.

"Today I marvel when I compare the food business of 50 and 75 years ago with modern, efficient, wasteless food distribution as we know it today."

Gas Service Charge Still in Bills

THE LEGISLATURE on Beacon Hill at its last session passed a law abolishing service charges by privately owned utilities where the consumer during the year uses electricity to the value of $9 or gas to the value of $7.

The Legislature, as an elected body responsive directly to the will of the people, thus ended a long fight.

So most people supposed. But, when the 50-cent service charge went into the discard recently, it was found that the State Department of Public Utilities had in its possession a new schedule of rates submitted by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

This schedule was tentatively approved by the utilities board as submitted by the gas company. It raised the gas rate sufficiently to "absorb" the service charge which the Legislature abolished, as many presumed, to benefit consumers.

Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the utilities board is quoted as saying:

"This will not mean any increase whatever in the monthly bills of customers of the Boston Consolidated."

Mr. Attwill might with equal truth have pointed out that customers will be deprived of the decrease the Legislature appears to have expected them to get.

THE utilities board, it is explained, wants an opportunity to go into the whole rate matter.

When it starts hearings November 8 it will have before it a petition of Mayors Mansfield of Boston and MacDonald of Waltham asking for rate reductions, together with a petition signed by practically all the members of the Legislature from Greater Boston.

Presumably these petitions refer to a reduction in the rates that prevailed before they were RAISED by the utilities board on request of the gas company to "absorb" the service charge killed by the General Court of the Commonwealth.

It becomes plain that gas rates can be RAISED in advance of a hearing, but who ever heard of them being LOWERED without a battle?

Even when they are lowered after a fight the people's triumph may prove to be a hollow victory, as in the case of Boston Edison, when the utilities board eased the price of electric current but more than offset the "advantage" to the consumer by tacking on the price of bulbs, until then furnished free.

New England Leads

New England continues to lead the nation in political economy. The Northeastern states alone seem adept in keeping tax increases in line with the gains in total wealth.

A recent statement by the International Economic Research Bureau points out that since 1890, expenditures of the New England States have only increased by 16 times. While all states in the country increased by 32 times.

Taxation in the same period increased by slightly under 13 times while all other states showed an increase of over 20 times. A progressive record to be proud of.

But self satisfaction with past performance is not enough. The war on taxation must never cease.

Modernization must always be the cry. And antiquated taxation supporting obsolete forms of government must go in order that progress will remain the order of the day.

The first step for the voters of New England is clear. They must force their will on the politicians who have insisted on keeping the useless county governments that are a drain on the public purse.

The issue is clear and the way must be ready to meet legitimate demands for relief without further increases in taxation.

Let New England, home of the patriarchs of the states, be the leader in the drive for modern government and sensible taxation.

Pharmacy and Health

Twenty years ago typhoid fever, bronchitis, diphtheria and diseases incident to childbirth were among the seven deadliest maladies.

Today all have been eliminated from the list and tuberculosis has been reduced from second to sixth place.

The seven "worst" diseases now are heart disease, cancer, apoplexy, pneumonia, Bright's disease, tuberculosis and influenza.

These facts have been brought to attention by M. Howard Stephenson, editor of "American Druggist," in an editorial calling attention to National Pharmacy Week, which begins October 8.

The new list can be interpreted variously.

Experts report, however, that the occurrence of nervous afflictions and the so-called "degenerative" diseases has increased due to the pace of modern life.

Actually the increase in these classes of mortal ailments is much less than the decrease in old epidemic types.

Consequently, the present balance represents a great advancement in public health, to which pharmacy has made its outstanding contributions.

Is Boston Wasteful?

There is always much talk about the wastefulness of city governments. It's one of those things that seems to be taken for granted—but not by the patrons of the new Sumner traffic tunnel.

Almost every day they see a rather shabby looking tow truck on duty there. Compared to the new and shining fire engine that stands beside it, the truck is so dismal that those who trouble to ask about it are surprised at its distinguished past.

Once it was a limousine. Bright and gleaming, it was saluted by policemen as it sped through the streets during the regime of Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols and part of that of Mayor James M. Curley.

Converted into a truck, the car is now earning money at the rate of 50 cents a tow . . . which is not exactly wasteful.

Machine Gun Seized

To the credit of the Maine State Police comes the capture of the first "illegal" machine gun seized since the Massachusetts State Police solved the Needham bank outrage.

The weapon was found, along with others, in the Maine woods between Biddeford and Alfred.

The police found the number had been filed off, to prevent its being traced. The drafters of the new Federal law requiring the listing of such arms appear to have believed, quite innocently, that crooks would be accommodating enough to let the numbers alone.

They haven't been when stealing automobiles, either as regards registration plates or engine numbers. So now they're rendering machine gun identifications more difficult.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

SHOULD BOYS BE RAISED BY WOMEN?

Three of us sitting peacefully over our coffee—two women and a man. Presently the man dropped a bomb shell by saying—

"Boys shouldn't be raised by women. That's the trouble with America today. Our boys are in charge of women almost exclusively for the first eighteen years of their lives — either their mothers or women teachers. Then they're set in the mold."

Elsie Robinson

Whereupon, of course, the war was on!

"What do you mean by 'sappy, sentimentalists'?" indignantly demanded one woman. "Naturally, every woman tries to give her son some refinement, so he'll appreciate the finer things of life; tries to instil a set of standards—"

WOMEN'S STANDARDS

"Yes," he answered, "but what kind of standards? Woman's kind. A woman's idea of conduct—utterly different from a man's—"

"Why, I never heard of anything so absurd!" the other woman retorted. "A modern woman has exactly the same conception of conduct as a man. Honesty — generosity — loyalty— decency — what more does any boy need?"

"Quite a few things," he grinned, "which to the average woman seem quite unimportant. Courage, for one thing. Not only moral courage, which all women appreciate. But mental courage. The courage to think . . . to think for himself . . . and to stick by what he thinks, even though it's unpopular and unprofitable. To the average woman that sort of courage is at least queer, if not downright dangerous."

"Well, I certainly wouldn't want MY boy to be one of these weird creatures who never fit in," one mother retorted.

"Of course you wouldn't. Women are natural conformists. They're strong for conventions. They have an instinctive horror of anything that menaces the status quo—because that endangers the home, their security and comfort!"

"But—" Both of us were clamoring for a hearing now, but the man had the floor.

"ISN'T GOOD SPORT"

"And that isn't the only place where a woman's standard differs from a man's. There isn't one woman in a hundred who's really a good sport. She may be ten times more sweet and tender than a man—more self-sacrificing and braver in standing pain.

"But she isn't a good sport when it comes to facing criticism or competition—meeting life as a man must. She isn't as tolerant, either, as a man. She can't or won't compromise—things must go her way or not at all."

"Well, even if it's true, which I don't at all admit," said the older woman, "how does her training harm a boy? If she lays a good moral foundation for his character?"

"But that's just the point!" cried the man. "Women train boys by THEIR conception of morals for THEIR kind of a world. But women still haven't an idea of what the real world is like. As a consequence the crop of sissies is increasing yearly.

"Even if the youngster acts like a regular egg outside, you'll find that he's chockful of sappy sentimentality he's learned from his mother. In a pinch he doesn't reason—he emotes. That's what's the matter with America today. We're soft. We can't take it. We run around in dizzy circles."

But at this point the thing became a red hot free-for-all and only a sports reporter could do it justice. However, there's enough of the argument to give YOU a chance to say YOUR piece. Which is WHAT?

Do you believe that American males are going sissy because they're women-trained?

Do you think the average woman's standard isn't broad or beefy enough for males?

Or do you believe that the modern mother knows her world as well as the modern father—and is as competent to raise her son?

Marry-Go-Round -:- -:- By Helen Rowland

Our grandfathers and grandmothers made the mistake of keeping their best clothes for Sunday and their best linen and silver locked away in the closet. But they did not make the mistake of keeping young love on ice or deferring marriage, until their hearts had atrophied or their arteries had begun to harden.

Helen Rowland

This modern custom of deferring marriage until you can afford a smart car or a show-wedding or a honey moon trip is just cheating yourself out of life's greatest adventure—Young Love! Why should two people, who are perfectly SURE of their love and who are earning enough to subsist on, wait until all the glamour has worn off their romance before signing the necessary slip of paper and beginning life together?

Marriage may be an economic problem; but it is one which is easily solved in these days, when two pay envelops can blossom where there used to be only one, and when a wife can be an asset financially, instead of a liability. The modern bridegroom doesn't have to listen to any of that "Can-you-support-my-daughter-in-the-style-to-which-she-is-accustomed" stuff, with which poor Grandfather was tormented and bullied.

These are grim days, when the sooner a girl realizes that she was not born to act a household pet or a parlor ornament, but to be some man's TEAM-MATE, the happier she'll be. The days of the mollusc, the toy-wife and the harem-wife are over—and the sooner women face that fact, the better.

The woman who is not willing to face poverty and struggle with a man, in these days, is not the wife for THAT man. The man who is too selfish to sacrifice some of his bachelor luxuries and amusements in order to marry a woman is not the husband for that woman. There is not enough LOVE in their mutual bank-account to marry on. They will always be love-paupers.

The girl who is putting off marriage until she finds a millionaire will be lucky if she finds a mere spouse with which to look for him. Because millionaires are becoming scarcer and scarcer. And most of them are old enough to creak at the joints, anyhow. By the time a man makes a million, he is usually too busy counting his calories, worrying about his blood-pressure, and thinking about his stocks and bonds and golf score to be a very thrilling and ecstatic bridegroom.

It is far easier for two young people, who are glamorously and rapturously in love with each other, to bear poverty together than it is to bear it alone. If you miss the Springtime of life together, you are missing something that will never return—life's highest, sweetest and most dazzling adventure.

"I sometimes wonder what the vintners buy one-half so precious as the thing they sell," chanted old Omar. And I sometimes wonder what these cautious young lovers expect to buy, one-half so precious as the long-deferred marriages are only dead sea fruit.

YOUTH RECLAIMED

I thought that I was getting old a year or two ago.
I'd never heard of Goshn or of Echoolboy Lynwood Rowe.
My baseball days were over. I had come to middle age
And merely with a casual glance I scanned the sporting page.
I thought my blood was cooling and my eye had lost its gleam,
But I'm just as keen as ever now we've got a fighting team.

Now I'm cheering Mickey Cochrane with the same old thrill and throb
That was mine in days long vanished when I cheered the dashing Cobb;
And I'm reading all the gossip which the papers have to tell
About Gehringer and Greenberg, Marvin Owen and Rogell.
Oh, I thought that age had claimed me, but a youngster still I seem
With the same old love for baseball now we have a fighting team.

I can name the players over and the other teams I know.
I'm afraid of Ruth and Gehrig, and I'm glad that it is so.
For a fear like that is healthy. I'd be old beyond a doubt
If I didn't stand up shouting: "Burn 'em in and strike 'em out!"
Oh, I thought the zest had left me, but I find I still can scream
With the old-time joy of baseball now we have a fighting team.

Age is merely lack of interest. It is dullness that destroys.
Now a lot of us old-timers have found out we still are boys.
Pulses tingle at a single and a double finds us thrilled
And our hearts start palpitating when they get the bases filled.
All the old are feeling younger, yes, much younger than they seem,
For there's youth and health and rapture in a fighting baseball team.

Human Side of the News; Horoscopes of Hitler

By Edwin C. Hill

The astrologers will have to do a better job than they have done in divining the future of Adolph Hitler if they want us to believe that there is something of the exactness of science in their work. Hitler's horoscope, according to the star-gazers of Germany, shows him a child of destiny who will reach a dominant position in the world through the allegiance of his people.

Now this is totally at variance with what the American astrologists learned at their annual convention. The report here had it that Hitler was born under the sign of Saturn "in the tenth house and retrograde," which is the sign of Napoleon, Dillinger and the Titanic.

From this the soothsayers gather that he will rule until next spring and meet a violent end. It might not be well to wager on either of these findings. Astrologers have been known to be wrong even more than half of the time.

IN DAYS OF BABYLON

The Babylonians gave us astrologers and the American public gives them and kindred folk such as palm readers and phrenologists more than $100,000,000 a year. So many are the gullible that in most cities and states there is a law against it.

The Alabama Supreme Court only recently upheld the ordinance of the city of Birmingham in a ruling which says: "While persons consult fortune tellers as a matter of amusement, the business is not to be recognized as one to be exercised as of right, subject to regulation merely." Astrology began as astronomy, the study of the planets and the stars by the Babylonians, Assyrians, Egyptians and Greeks.

The ancients knowing the effect of the sun and the moon on the earth turned to other heavenly bodies and added immeasurably to human knowledge. But soon they strayed away from the pure science of their subject and began drawing conclusions about the effect of the phenomena of the heavens on the lives of men and the destiny of nations.

Millions have believed through the centuries, kings and commoners alike, and do believe even today that in that imaginary circle in the heavens called the Zodiac things take place which influence or control their actions and fortunes. Warriors down to Napoleon consulted the stars and the fortune tellers.

Nowadays the matter of buying a thousand shares of Steel, or the taking of an airplane trip and even the taking of a wife often depends upon what the star-gazer has to offer in the way of good or bad omens to his client.

The circle of the zodiac from which horoscopes are read come from the ancients. It is a map of the heavens, embracing the planets and is divided into 12 signs marked by 12 constellations.

The signs, which in turn, are applied to parts of the human body, are: Aries the ram; Taurus the bull; Gemini the twins; Cancer the crab; Leo the lion; Virgo the virgin; Libra the balance; Scorpio the scorpion; Sagittarius the anchor; Capricornus the goat; Aquarius the water carrier, and Pisces the fishes.

"LUCKY STAR"

The expression "born under a lucky star" is a product of astrology and the date, hour and minute of one's coming into the world is most important when one is concerned about a horoscope.

For example, if you were born at midnight on September 30, 1833, and Mercury was in Scorpio and the other signs in some relation to the remainder of the planets, then medicine should have been your life work instead of the manufacture of sausage.

Astrologers are wont to point out to astrologers that the stars are not at all as they were in the days of the Babylonians, and that the constellations make a complete circle of the zodiac every 25,000 years.

Dr. Dirk Brouwer of Yale, in a lecture on the subject, mentioned this inaccuracy of the astrological tables.

"Signs of the zodiac and a scattering use of the names of planets and astronomical words still impress people more than the development in the field of relativity," he said. "Astrologers take some specific instance, or several instances of events, which have occurred when the stars were in a certain position.

"They then generalize on this basis. It would be just as inaccurate to try to reach a conclusion on statistics by using only a part of the figures, except that the figures used would, at least, have some foundation in fact."

Safeguarding Liberty

CONTROLLER-GENERAL M'CARL is once more performing his useful role as a breakwater against the unstemmed outflow of public moneys.

By a ruling just announced he has interposed his effective veto upon the use of $15,000,000 for the inauguration of the President's ambitious idea of a gigantic forest shelter belt in the plains area of the Western States, to combat drouths that may occur in the future.

The position filled by Controller-General McCarl is not a conspicuous one in Washington, but it is a very independent one, and its powers have frequently been used by him to good effect and the great service of the country.

His independence, both of the Chief Executive and Congress, is shown by the fact that in the present instance he is setting aside an executive order of President Roosevelt, for no other reason than that he does not believe the President's attempted action is within the authorizations of Congress.

THE Controller-General appears to be speaking by the book, and so far as we can see, his position is well grounded.

The money which it was proposed to spend under the President's order was to come from the $525,000,000 drouth relief fund, appropriated at the last session of Congress. The latter based its appropriation on the estimated costs of special undertakings in which the forest tree belt was not included.

The Controller-General now holds that Congress must have an opportunity to pass upon the merits of the proposed undertaking and to authorize specifically the proposed use of public funds in carrying it forward.

There is a profound constitutional question involved in this matter—the requirement of the Constitution that all appropriations shall originate in the popular branch of Congress and be sanctioned by the people acting through their elected representatives.

For Congress to delegate to the Executive the initiation of expenditures which thus become, in truth, outlays made by the Executive, as his discretion or purposes may dictate, is as fundamental a departure from the basic principles of American self-government as can be imagined.

HERE is no question of the elasticity of our Constitution—no question of modernizing it by interpretation so that it may prove an apt instrument in the hands of restless theorists who regard all restraint of principle or constitutional restraint with impatience.

Appropriations by the Executive, no matter how sound his discretion or laudable his purposes, amount to much more than an innovation in constitutional practice.

THEY CONSTITUTE A COMPLETE NEGATION OF THE AMERICAN THEORY OF GOVERNMENT.

If money expressly appropriated by Congress for one purpose can be spent arbitrarily by the Executive for some wholly different purpose, there is no end to the evils that will ensue.

A good Executive may indeed desire to divert appropriations to good purposes only.

But if the precedent be established, what is to prevent a BAD Executive from having money VOTED for GOOD PURPOSES, in order to get appropriation bills through Congress, and then using the money for PURPOSES UTTERLY BAD?

IT WAS against such an assumption of power on the part of the Executive that the American colonists flocked to arms and revolted against the British Crown. Their protest against this assumption of power became the very cornerstone of American self-government.

It looks as if Controller-General McCarl, in a modest sort of way, has performed a great deed—for which, some day, when reason and sanity have regained their sway in the administration of our affairs, he may be greatly praised and fervently thanked by all right-thinking Americans.
